

Wake's Black GOP's Rap Horton

For Mayoral Post-Say Black

Question

Role In

Politics

The embers of an alleged smoldering fire that has been gaining since the appointment of Dr. Larnie Horton, former Kittrell College president, as assistant to Republican Gov. James E. Holshouser, Jr., seems to have spread to a devastating stage, according to a letter sent him by a group of black Wake County Republicans recently. When contacted by The CAROLINIAN at his office for comment Tuesday afternoon, Dr. Horton said he would not "degrade myself by responding to action of this kind."

The letter set out the fact that he, as an aide to the governor, was more a buffer to keep blacks from presenting their case directly to the governor, than aiding the black cause. This has been voiced by many black Republicans since Governor Holshouser took office.

The most damaging part of the letter related to the fact that not only has Horton, reportedly, bowed to the whims of superior whites, including Gene Anderson, controversial Holshouser aide, but it points out that Horton has now been accused of trying to determine who the black candidates should be in the several counties. More Than 300 March In Edgecombe Protest

TARBORO - More than 300 blacks marched from Princeville to the Edgecombe County Courthouse Sunday, to protest capital punishment as a result of 3 black men being sentenced to die in the North Carolina gas chamber on Dec. 9, 1973. The three young men, Vernon Leroy Brown, Bobby Hines and Jessie Lee Walston, were sentenced for the alleged rape of a white woman.

The sentencing caused concern throughout the northeastern county of Edgecombe. Protest marches and demonstrations are still being held, along with jail-ins. The blacks in the Tarboro area, says that the action of the presiding Judge John Webb, who (See 300 MARCH, P. 2)

Intruders Also Die In Fracas

BROOKLYN, N.Y. - The leader of an alleged Black Muslim sect was among four men who lost their lives as gunmen burst into the Bedford-Stuveysant area building here Monday night and opened fire, according to police. Also slain were the two intruders.

Bilal Abdullah Rahman, minister of the Yasin Mosque, was the target of the attack in what seemed to be an internal dispute. He died of multiple wounds in the foyer of the crumbling brick building on the border of the seamy Bedford-Stuveysant section. His followers raced from the top floors of the building and returned the fire, killing the gunmen, whose names were not released. The fourth victim was identified as Mohamed Ahmed. A fifth Muslim, known as Jamil Haqq, was in critical condition at Brooklyn Jewish Hospital.

"I opened the front door and there were just bodies sprawled out everywhere," said Officer Mike DiDonna of the Utica Avenue Stationhouse. "Blood all over the walls and the floor. The people in the mosque just stood there. They showed no emotion, they (See FOUR DEAD, P. 2)

WASHINGTON, N.C. - This eastern N.C. town, elected its first black city councilman in the November election, Louis Randolph, prominent funeral director. However, it departed from its old custom - electing the candidate that receives the highest vote in the council race as mayor.

Mr. Randolph led his closest contender 1,408 to 1,141. The second highest contender was not only white, but he had been the mayor for the past two years.

The tip-off was noted when the local paper carried an account of the election, the next day. It stated that the voters had elected two new councilmen and that the leader was black. It also said that the five council members would elect a mayor when they met for the first time after election. It also related that the incumbent mayor, Max Roebuck, was expected to be named mayor.

Even though Mr. Randolph was by-passed, he has pitched in and made himself felt. He has addressed himself to the needs of the town and has asserted himself toward making the community conscious of the wide disparity between white and black citizen treatment.

He is quite active in the fraternal affairs of North Carolina and plays a big role in state and national funeral (See INCUMBENT, P. 2)

GAO Report Was Wrong: S. Chisholm

BY LOUISE E. WYCHE
National Black News Service
WASHINGTON - Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm's Presidential campaign committee lashed out at the General Accounting Office for its allegations that "bank deposits totaling over $3,500 were not identified at all."

Saying the committee "concerned itself strictly" with safeguarding campaign funds, the Chisholm for President group, filed a complete financial report and statement with GAO in an effort to present the "full picture."

"Every dollar was banked on record," the committee answered in its 9-page report. "Every dollar was expended by bank check, on record."

Although it admitted that it had "to some extent," kept incomplete and inadequate records, the committee counsel, Samuel Korb, said the committee did, at times, fail to maintain a list of the addresses and occupations of those who sent money to Mrs. Chisholm's campaign.

A committee report, which was erroneously submitted to GAO as a "final report of the Chisholm campaign," was not, he said, and he charged it was "badly written and incorrect."

"It appeared that it was a final report, but it was not," he said. (See MRS. CHISHOLM, P. 2)

EDITOR'S NOTE - This column or feature is produced in the public interest with an aim towards eliminating its contents. Numerous individuals have requested that they be given the consideration of attributing their listing on the police blotter. This we would like to do. However, it is not our intention to be judge or jury. We merely publish the facts as we find them reported by the arresting officers. To keep out of the Crime Beat columns, merely means not being registered by a police officer in reporting his findings while on duty. So simply keep off the "Blotter" and you won't be in The Crime Beat.
