American Blacks, Israel Discussed In News Article

NEW YORK - Three subjects of nationwide interest are treated in the April issue of The Crisis, official publication of the NAACP. The relationship of "American Negroes and Israel" is discussed in the lead article by Bayard Rustin, executive director of the A. Philip Randolph Institute. Robert G. Jones, an observer of social and economic trends and a former resident of St. Croix, Virgin Islands, takes a look behind the recent killings which have occurred there. And an editorial points out the significance of "Two Pivotal Cases: DeFunis and Detroit." Rustin says that "one cannot dismiss the existence of controversy" between black people and Israel, but he thinks "its relevance and magnitude are of questionable dimension." He says that "traditional black leadership has been generous in embracing Israel's cause, (but) the same cannot be said for black nationalists or separatists."

Goldsboro Principal Given Final Rites

GOLDSBORO - Funeral services for Walter A. Foster, retired principal and respected citizen, were held at St. James AME Zion Church, 11 a.m. Wednesday, with Rev. G. J. Hill in charge. Bishop H. B. Shaw delivered the eulogy. Even though he underwent a serious operation at Duke Hospital the first part of the year, his death came as a shock to the Goldsboro community. He was believed to have been well on the way to recovery and when the word came that he had passed, it cast a pall over the city. Townspeople from all walks of life were in attendance, attesting to the fact that he was a brother beloved. He was a high churchman, being the son of an AME Zion minister and the brother of one of the denomination's most successful pastors, R. A. G. Foster, who preceded him in death by about six months. He held many offices in St. James Church and was chairman of the Trustee Board at the time of death. He was president of the Laymen's Council of the Cape Fear Conference and was also in charge of christian education. He was a delegate to the 1972 General Conference. He is survived by his wife, the former Pearl Massey, one brother, Moreland of Goldsboro; one sister, Anne Coleman, Washington, D.C. He graduated from Livingstone College in 1927. He taught in the Goldsboro School System and ended his teaching career as the principal of East End Elementary School, serving for 31 years. Even though he did not play any sports at Livingstone, he coached the Dillard High School football team to several honors, including championships. (See PRINCIPAL IS, P. 2)

EDITOR'S NOTE - This column or feature is intended to provide information with an aim towards eliminating its contents. Numerous individuals have requested that they be given the consideration of overlooking their listing on the police blotter. This we would like to do. However, it is not our position to judge or jury. We merely publish the facts as we find them reported by the arresting officers. To keep out of the Crime Beat columns, merely means not being registered by a police officer in reporting his findings. While on duty, do not simply keep off the "blotter" and you won't be in the Crime Beat.

HOSPITAL PATIENT TELLS IT ALL - Dorothy Lipscon Snelling related to Officers C. W. Harr and D. W. Dalmus, how she was manhandled by Matthew Moore, because of an argument between the two. The report showed that the officers were called to Wake Memorial Hospital's emergency, after having been called to investigate how the woman came about the damages believed to have been inflicted on her as the result of a beating Saturday. She is alleged to have received bruises to her right eye, forehead and other parts of her body. The victim said she would sign a warrant. (See CRIME BEAT, P. 3)

Restoring Ambition Of SBA

WASHINGTON, D. C. - The Small Business Administration this week announced the approval of funds amounting to $167,000 for the restoration of Washington's historic Howard Theatre.

The Howard Theatre project is a concentrated effort being undertaken by civic-minded individuals and public and private organizations to restore to prominence and dignity those black institutions and communities that have deteriorated because of civil disturbances, urban exodus, neglect and time.

Established in 1912, the Howard Theatre, located at 7th and T Streets, N.W., served as the birthplace of careers for many black entertainers, who later carved a niche for themselves in the entertainment world and are now famous comedians or musicians.

The theatre presently has a seating capacity for an audience of 1,200 and has alternately offered musical
