A Voice From Woman's Prison

Editor's Note: The CAROLINIAN, in its continuing efforts to give its readers unbiased, varied and differing opinions, is pleased to present the final in a two-part series of an article, written by an inmate at the Women's Correctional Center, here. The writer is Ms. Betty Hyman, 27, a native of Tarboro, who happens to be white. She is serving a 16-20 year sentence for voluntary manslaughter. Ms. Hyman attends classes in the secretarial school at the prison, is a member of its Women's Club, takes part in the recreational program and is considered a model prisoner. She is also a religious leader. She has been at the facility for almost 2 years. Ms. Hyman's story follows.

Wednesday morning, as the day grew nearer for the proposed riot, the tension getting heavier, girls getting more nervous and restless, inmates began fighting among themselves and harassing others that did not want to participate. The day passed with relative calm until later in the afternoon Propaganda had it that the action would be that night, since no one would be expecting it. The protestors had also spread the rumor that the buildings would be set on

Racial Tensions Mounting

A survey of racial feelings throughout the United States revealed that Boston has set off a conflagration that could destroy the motivation that race relations has had since the turbulent days of the 60s.

The CAROLINIAN received advanced notice as early as Aug. 8, that Boston police were preparing for its greatest outbreak since the city was mandated to integrate its schools. Persons in the know said that even though the "city of culture" had almost, since Crispus Attucks fell at Boston Commons, had so patterned itself until it could not and would not endure if democracy really came.

The informers related how the schools had been built in the inner city for certain racial groups even though segregation was not the rule. The inner city structure made it the now most devastating exception to fair play and equality that the city has ever faced (See TENSIONS, P. 2)

Rep. Rangel Blasts Act Of Dept.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congressman Charles B. Rangel (D-N.Y.) last week expressed his outrage and dismay upon learning of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's decision to establish credit up to $1 million to finance export sales of U.S. beef and dairy breeding cattle to ranchers in the Republic of South Africa. The program also designates the Standard Bank of South Africa, Ltd. and/or other eligible banks as the guarantor to make it easier to finance the export sales.

In a letter to Earl Butz, Secretary of the Department, the New York Democrat said, "I deplore such encouragement in light of South Africa's policies and has voiced to the UN their support for a total embargo against the racist regime, the U.S. government persists in its efforts to further trade, thereby promoting the policies of the immoral South African regime. Encourage." (See REP. RANGEL, P. 2)

CRIME

EDITOR'S NOTE: This column or feature is produced in the public interest, with an aim towards eliminating its contents. Numerous individuals have requested that they be given the consideration of extending their listing on the police blotter. This we would like to do. However, it is not our position to be judge of juries. We merely publish the facts as we find them reported by the arresting officers. To keep out of the crime beat columns, merely means not being registered by a police officer in reporting findings while on duty. So simply keep off the "blotter" and you won't be in the Crime Beat.

He reportedly saw two juveniles running from the immediate area, he said. Damage to the door was set at $10. (See CRIME BEAT P. 3)
