High Court Judge Bars Tex. Bid

National Black News Service WASHINGTON — Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell, Jr., has refused to void a lower court order calling for desegregation of Dallas schools, by busting it if necessary.

He barred the request by the Dallas School Board that he stay the effect of a July ruling by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, in New Orleans. The school board had asked the full Supreme Court to review the ruling.

The appeals court had ordered a desegregation plan put into effect in Dallas by the start of the second semester of the 1975-76 school year. The court had earlier disapproved a plan, which had been approved by U.S. District Judge W. M. Taylor, that called for rewarding high school attendance districts and linking grade schools through closed circuit television.

Dr. Mayo 'Wants To Help All'

CHICAGO, Ill. — Friends and supporters of Dr. J. Haskell Mayo, pastor of Coppin Memorial A.M.E. Church, 5633 Michigan Avenue, say his campaign to be elected a bishop at the General Conference, which will be held in Atlanta, Ga., May 1976, is being stepped up and bids fair for victory.

The veteran minister, who says he would like to serve in the highest office his denomination affords, also says that he is too busy making Coppin more effective in the Chicago community, right now. He is intensely interested in the plight of those on welfare. His biggest thrust, at the present time, is care for the aged and infirm. He has adopted the credo "As you did it to the least of these, you did it unto Me."

This theme characterizes his Sunday morning broadcasts that has thousands of listeners. He pleads with those in physical need to let their desires be known. The broadcasts are proclaimed as a panacea for the lonely, a solace for the disturbed and a haven for the wearied.

Workers In Steel Ask For Rights

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — President I. W. Abel of the United Steelworkers of America (USWA), after studying the recent court ruling upholding the consent Decree affecting minority workers in the nine major Basic Steel companies, said the decision approved "the security approach," taken in the Decree and also pointed out the advantages secured by the Union and its members under the Decree.

In another statement issued at the same time, the Director of the USWA's Civil Rights Department, Alex Fuller, said that the court "has sustained the aims" of the Consent Decree as "an effective instrument for the settlement of discrimination charges."

The Fifth U.S. Circuit Court in New Orleans, on August 18, upheld in every respect the Consent Decree entered into by the USWA, the named major Basic Steel companies and the Government on April 15, 1974.

The Consent Decree was the result of cooperative action by the USWA, nine major Basic Steel companies and the U.S. (See STEEL RACISM, P. 2)

Women To Testify On Low-Paying Employment

WASHINGTON, D.C. — More than a dozen members of the Senate and House are expected to receive testimony from women in low-paying, high-unemployment occupations in the Rayburn House Office Building, September 10th.

Women, particularly minority women, are the first to fall victim to a recession and the last to feel relief," said Edith Barksdale-Sloan, executive director of the National Committee on Household Employment, the sponsoring organization. The economists who bluntly "tell us that the recession is at an end are invited to come and hear these women tell like it is," she continued in letters of invitation to Members of Congress.

Ms. Barksdale-Sloan pointed out that both the Congresspersons and the audience-participants might benefit from a mutual exchange of ideas and opinions.

This "SPEAK-OUT FOR ECONOMIC JUSTICE: Poor Women in the Economy" will provide a forum for women who are asked to accept drudgery and defeat as a way of life. Ms. Barksdale-Sloan said.

Representative Shirley Chisholm will chair the meeting which starts at 9 a.m. in Room 2175 Rayburn HOB.

Womack Talks To Newsmen

BY RICK HIGH

Lamonte Womack joined the Marines because his older brother, Roger had joined. After he got in, his younger brother, Mike, decided he too would don the dress of the always-ready fighting group. After serving two years and some odd months, Lamonte was given what he thought was an honorable release, but said he later found out that the discharge that he had obtained was what the military calls an undesirable discharge.

"I plan to write to the Secretary of the Navy, in hopes that he or someone in his office will review my discharge," said Womack.

"The Corps is in the process of getting rid of about 900 people that they think are unfit to be considered Marines. And most of the people that they want to wash out of the Corps are brothers," responded Mike, the younger Womack.

The Womack brothers talked freely in their parents' home in the Apollo Heights section of the Capital City.

"I don't know how they (the military) go about issuing those discharge papers, but I would like to see someone check into the problem," related Mrs. Elsie Womack, the mother.

Lamonte said that he was to be reprimanded by the commanding officer of his battalion whenever he was "written up" for a violation, but he said that the officers let the charges build up and later on he was told to sign some papers, which led to his ouster from the Corps.

"The whole thing is racist in nature," replied Gary Johnson of Harrisburg, Pa. "my mother was very sick, and the CO told me that if it wasn't pertaining to Marine Corp affairs that I wasn't supposed to go home to see about her."

Coroner Bennett Mourned

Wake County Coroner Marshall W. Bennett, Sr., died at 1:10 p.m. Monday at Wake Medical Center. He was 75 years old. The coroner entered the hospital on August 22 after suffering a "blackout," fell and broke his left hip and left arm, according to Mrs. Marie Cooper Bennett, his widow. She also said the "blackout" was caused by a stroke. She also said he had gone out to check on his tractor at 6:30 a.m. August 22.

Long a champion of human rights, Coroner Bennett was known and respected by many blacks in the Wake County area as an impartial and fair man.

All of the juries which he empaneled often involving black fatalities, were composed of at least three blacks and usually three whites.

The coroner of Wake County for the past 23 years, Bennett was given a funeral on Wednesday, September 3, at Mitchell Funeral Home Chapel at 3 p.m. Burial, with full Masonic rites, followed at Montlawn Memorial Park.

While in the hospital, the coroner suffered several other small strokes. Mrs. Bennett stated.

Born in Creedmoor, he moved to Wake County in 1916. He was appointed coroner in 1952 to fill an unexpired term. (See CORONER, P. 2)
