

Lawyers Assail Helms

Senator Blasted For Words

CHAPEL HILL — The N. C. Association of Black Lawyers, in a court resolution, released here Monday, condemned Senator Jesse Helms, the senior, in that branch of our government, in Washington for his continued effort to discredit Floyd McKissick and his associates in the developing of Soul City in Warren County.

The lawyers also took hard cracks at a Raleigh daily newspaper for the artillery it has provided to attack the project.

The resolution criticized both the paper and the senator, but it also set forth that if there was evidence that something had gone wrong, in any endeavor carried on by blacks, that it should not be condoned. It recognized the fact that black leaders should not be excused for wrong-doing.

Charles E. Daye, president, said the resolution was not intended solely to support McKissick and definitely not to support all black leaders.

"If black leaders are engaged in corruption, we don't condone that," Daye said.

But he said the 100-member association believes that "black leaders all over the country, one by one, are getting knocked off or getting attacked. In some instances, these are unfounded attacks."

Defeat Of Regulations Requested

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm has asked HEW Secretary David Mathews not to approve proposed regulations which would, if signed into law, allow for the creation of federally-supported proprietary home health care services.

In a letter to Mathews, Mrs. Chisholm warned that the "development of proprietary centers or services - some of which would sacrifice quality for profit - would most adversely harm the low-income elderly."

Mathews is expected to review proposed regulations prepared by the Social and Rehabilitation Services Division of HEW. These regulations would allow states to use federal money, administered through the Medicaid program, to pay for services provided by private, profit-making health care enterprises. Currently, subsidized home health care is provided (See REP. CHISHOLM, P. 2)

Expanded Role Of Black Press Told

VIRGIN ISLANDS — The expanded role of the Black Press in promoting the welfare of the black community was outlined by speakers here last week at the Mid-Winter Workshop of the National Newspaper Publishers Association.

Among the speakers were: Gov. Cyril E. King of the Virgin Islands; Lt. Govs. George L. Brown of Colorado and Mervyn M. Dymally of California; Commissioner Benjamin L. Hooks of the Federal Communications Commission.

"Never cease to organize block housewives, committees within fraternal and religious and social organizations to monitor tv news programs and send letters of protest or praise as the case may be," said Commissioner Hooks in his keynote address on the larger role of the Black Press.

A major feature of the Workshop was the presentation of awards of R. J. Reynolds Industries and Anheuser-Busch for their sponsorship of $50,000 and $25,000 respectively in journalism scholarships, and to 22 other firms that sponsor merit awards.

The opening activities of the Workshop were a reception by Governor and Mrs. King at their mansion, and, a sit-down dinner for 400 by Publisher and Mrs. Melchior at their spacious home. The workshop ended with an all-day picnic at Magen Bay.

The most heated panel discussion focused on the preparation of new professionals for the press. While the representatives of schools of journalism claimed that their graduates preferred not to work for the Black Press, the Publishers argued that it was the job of the schools to "de-brainwash" their students who are "victims of American racism."

New approaches to newspaper management were discussed by panel Chairman Kenneth Drew of the New York Voice, and other black publishers and journalists. (See EXPANDED, P. 2)

Area Blacks Urged Away From Angola

BY PAT BRYANT

Sam Dias is an Angolan-born freedom fighter who has spent the last 15 years studying in this country. He has studied the events of the last several years in Angola and Africa and now cautions blacks not to be deceived into fighting in the Angolan War. He lives in Raleigh.

Dias, a mild mannered 1973 Shaw University graduate, sees the eventual over-throw of all colonial governments in Africa. He said that American Blacks are being tricked into thinking that U. S. involvement in Angola is in the interest of Blacks and Africans because, "The world will be saved from communism."

The real question, as he sees it, is the "continued exploitation by the U. S. and the West of African resources and labor."

He said that the U. S. financed the Portuguese occupation of Angola by giving $435 million in a loan to Partridge in 1972. This does not include support from the Organization of American States (OAS) which is heavily funded by the U. S.

Dias, who has a Master of Arts degree in Political Science and International Theory from Iowa State University is concerned that, especially in the Raleigh area, Blacks be alerted to the dangers of becoming mercenaries to fight against Africans. Many newscasts have reported that groups and individuals in the U. S., including the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) have financed mercenaries to

Williams To Fight Denial

Housing Official

The Board of Commissioners of The Raleigh Housing Authority has referred an appeal of Raymond Williams, a local black contractor, to the Professional Services Committee for recommendation.

Williams had submitted a bid to demolish the Seven-Up Bottling plant at the corner of South and McDowell Streets, but the bid opening was delayed. Housing Authority officials said the bid was not opened because it failed to include a bond as required by state law. No date has been set for the meeting of the Professional Services Committee.

Williams presented John F. Mentzer, an official of the Housing Authority, with a copy of the state law Monday. The law requires bid bonds to accompany public contracts in excess of $10,000 for construction and altering of buildings or purchase of materials and supplies in excess of $2,500. He said that the law does not apply to him because his bid was less than $10,000 and the law does not apply to demolition of

Firings Of RCRC Duo Is Talked

BY PAT BRYANT

The executive committee of Raleigh Community Relations recommended to RCRC that its two staff persons be fired at a Tuesday night meeting. The commission did not take action on the recommendation for the firing of Malcolm Hulslander or Beverly R. Mitchell, the executive director and associate director, respectively. The City Manager L. P. Zachary assigned the investigation of Ms. Mitchell's alleged misconduct to Malcolm Hulslander. Hulslander was to have made a report to the city manager last week. The content of his report could not be determined at press time, but informed sources say that Hulslander's report confirmed misconduct. The code requires that before Ms. Mitchell could be fired, the city would have to initiate proceedings in criminal court against her. If found guilty, Ms. Mitchell would be subject to a fine, jail term and dismissal.

The matter may be concluded at a hearing that may be held soon by the RCRC. (See RCRC STAFF, P. 2)

Rate Hike In Cablevision Is Approved Despite Bias Claims

BY PAT BRYANT

Despite the constant appeals to the Law and Finance Committee that American Cablevision and Communication Corporations of Denver, Colorado operates its Raleigh subsidiary with racist hiring policies, the Law and Finance Committee of the City Council voted Tuesday to recommend that the council approve a one dollar increase in the base rates to $7.00.

Ralph Campbell, president of the Raleigh-Wake Citizens Association, made a complaint to the Raleigh Community Relations Committee and has complained to the Law and Finance Committee to see if the company discriminates in its hiring and programming. Ms. Crystal Bryant, representing a group called Freedom Media, also pointed out at a public hearing last week, that the company hired 18 employees, none of which were black and only 4 women. There has been virtually no response from either the City Council nor the Law and Finance Committee to these charges.

A legal question has been raised by Ms. Bryant as to whether the council can legally raise the rates. She points out that the franchise calls for a ceiling of $6.00 and explains that prior to a rate increase, the franchise would have to be amended. The last public hearing on Feb. 4, was not advertised as a hearing to amend the franchise, but a hearing to consider a rate increase. The City Attorney's office is presently researching Ms. Bryant's contention.

Says Higher Education May Be Out For Future

PHILA. ELPHIA, Pa. — "In the new emerging circumstances, higher education is over-extended, is not being managed for future strength, and lacks relevance to the needs of society." This is what Dr. Day W. Forrester of MIT's School of Management told the opening session of the Association of American Colleges (AAC) annual meeting here Monday.

The general objectives of higher education - to create the whole man, to unify knowledge, and to provide a perspective on social change - remain valid, according to Dr. Forrester. But the current embodiment of those goals is suitable only to the simpler past structure of a growth society, he said.

The Washington-based AAC represents the nation's approximately 800 liberal arts institutions. This year's theme is "The Future of Higher Education In A Radically Changing Society."

300 Attend Career Day In Raleigh

"Career Opportunities Await You at The Aug." was the theme of the annual Senior Career Day, held at St. Augustine's College on Tuesday. Approximately 300 students from North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia high schools were present. They were entertained and given a chance to listen to the history and offerings of the college. Junior college students also attended.

Dr. Prezell R. Robinson, president of the college, posed these questions: "Where are you?" "Where do you want to be?" and "What will be required when you get there?" He said that hard work, a disciplined mind, the ability to think critically, and the ability to separate the real from the unreal, are the pre-requisites for achieving these goals.

Expressions were made by officers of the Student Government Association and the (See 300 ATTEND, P. 2)
