Violence Erupts In Halifax

HENDERSON — More than 150 angry and protesting black persons, led by Golden Frinks of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, emerged from their makeshift tent city last Sunday and came to the local courthouse, protesting the acquittal of Mrs. Sandra Dupree of Scotland Neck, white wife of a Free Will Baptist minister in the killing of Henry Lee Dickens, 21-year-old black ex-paratrooper, also of Scotland Neck. No violence was reported, however, Dickens was killed in his mother's front yard.

According to a spokesman for the Vance County Sheriff's Department, the protestors "broke camp Sunday night and everybody's pretty well cleared out now."

The group came up Chestnut where they were camped and held a rally there. They then turned around and returned, according to a spokesman for the department.

Also on hand were about 50 State Highway patrolmen, officers from the Henderson

2 Fires Follow Freedom

SCOTLAND NECK — Three firebombings took place here Monday night, where many blacks are angry over the acquittal last Saturday of the wife of a white minister, accused of killing a black man March 11. Two of the blazes were put out by firemen before serious damage was done and, in the third attempt, the bomb did not ignite.

The cab of a fuel oil truck was the scene of one of the blazes, ignited by a bomb at the Harrison Oil Company. According to witnesses, the intense heat melted the plastic

Says He Favors Debates With All

Howard N. Lee, candidate for Lt. Governor, last Friday called on the other candidates to join him in accepting Rep. Herbert Hyde's call for a joint debate.

Mr. Lee in remarks prepared for delivery during his swing through Duplin County said, "I have informed my friend Herbert Hyde of my decision to accept his debate proposal and have sent a letter to the other candidates urging them to do so. We should settle on a date now." Lee stressed, "while there is still some flexibility in the candidates' campaign schedules, a debate presenting all the candidates would be a unique opportunity for the voters to compare the candidates."

Vow To Continue Actions

BY WILLIE WHITE, Staff Writer

Raleigh's striking sanitation workers received a support boost this week when a large number of black leaders called a press conference and joined the cause of the strikers. The situation was labeled as "explosive."

Meeting at the Martin Street Baptist Church, representatives of political, civic and religious bodies announced solid support for the strikers.

The Rev. Leon White, head of the North Carolina-Virginia United Church of Christ, said the strike is the kind of situation that "people across the state and nation are beginning to identify with." But White and the pastor of the First Baptist Church, Dr. C. W. Ward, urged a quick settlement of the dispute between the strikers and the workers so that the issue will remain on the local level. "There are people waiting and ready to exploit the situation. Let's keep it on the local level," the leaders urged.

When a reporter asked the leaders if they were threatening that violence would soon erupt in the city, the Rev. John W. Fleming, a Shaw Divinity School professor, responded, "The threat is in the eye of the beholder."

Ward announced that some of the leaders had met Monday with Raleigh City Manager L. P. Zachary concerning the strike. And while it was apparent that little or no progress was made, Ward maintained some optimism. "As long as you are talking, I cannot say that no progress was made."

White said that black leaders do not "intend to sit idly by and see these jobs taken" from the 157 sanitation workers who lost their jobs last Friday because they stayed off the job three consecutive days in an effort to gain a 3.5 percent pay increase. The City does not recognize the action of the workers as being a strike.

As of Wednesday morning, the City was still working toward full replacement of all

Problems Of Cities Is Topic

National Black News Service WASHINGTON — Prevention, disarmament and rehabilitation programs aimed at reducing "predatory" street crimes in the nation's cities have failed, according to two authors — James Q. Wilson and Barbara Boland — who wrote a chapter on crime in The Urban Predicament, a new book recently published by the Urban Institute, a Washington-based nonprofit research organization.

Wilson and Boland conclude that to cities must concentrate policies and tax dollars on those programs which have proven to combat crime: deterrence programs, accomplishing higher arrest rates, and increasing the certainty of penalizing on conviction.

The Urban Predicament examined five areas of major concern that bear directly on the quality of metropolitan life — finance, housing, crime, education and transportation. The underlying forces affect

Guard, Inmates Fight

Five to six inmates at the Correction Center for Women have been put in administrative segregation as a result of a disturbance at the Center Sunday.

According to Supt. Halie A. Wilson, an inmate's mother was not allowed to visit her daughter because she had improper identification. "The mother understood this and said she would return next Sunday with proper identification," Ms. Wilson said. She said the mother had a metal Social Security card instead of the original paper card issued by the government. The metal cards can be secured from door-to-door salesmen and are not accepted as identification, she said.

Ms. Wilson would not identify the inmates pending completion of an investigation. However, other sources said the disturbance began when inmate Alice Wise's mother attempted to visit her.

Ms. Wilson said the inmate "burst into the administration building cursing and crying" because her mother was not allowed to visit. At this point, Capt. M. L. McLamb told the inmate that she would have to be locked up until she "cooled off." The inmate left the building with McLamb and attacked him afterwards, Ms. Wilson said. She said several other inmates joined in the disturbance. Ms. Wilson said the mother saw the daughter through the fence.

Some inmates, on the other hand, contend that the inmates who are now on administrative

Many Blacks To Be Placed In Capitol

National Black News Service

WASHINGTON — Rep. Charles B. Rangel (D-N.Y.) recently announced that the Congress was going to take action on his request that an effort be made to include art works depicting black Americans in a positive manner in the United States Capitol.

"The Joint Committee on Arrangements for the Commemoration of the Bicentennial has approved a plan that would provide an exhibit recognizing all those black Americans who have served in the U.S. Congress," Rangel said. "The project includes a photo-biographical brochure, and the exhibit which will be on display in the capitol during this Bicentennial year."

Rangel initiated this effort upon receiving a copy of the publication, Art in the United States Capitol, during the latter half of last year. It was just outraged that out of a total number of 700 art works, black Americans were only depicted in five of them. It was my belief that something had to be done quickly to remedy this situation," Rangel said.

The New York Democrat

Rep. John Conyers To Urge A Black As Veep

National Black News Service

DETROIT, Mich. — One black Democratic member of Congress has announced that he will nominate a fellow black member for Vice President at the Democratic Convention in New York.

Rep. John Conyers, Jr. (D-Mich.) announced here that he will throw Californian Ron Dellums' name into the hopper for the number two spot on the Democratic Presidential ticket.

Conyers called the nomination of Dellums an opportunity for the convention to select an outstanding leader who embodies the humane and progressive ideals of the great majority of the American people.

Emphasizing that the choice of the Vice Presidential nominee should rest with the convention delegates, Conyers said that the nomination of Ron Dellums would bring geographical balance and representation of the interests of urban Americans to the Democratic ticket which is critical to success in November.

"We have within our reach," Conyers said, "the opportunity and wherewithal to respond to the real needs of Americans, and with the vision, courage and competence of Ron Dellums the Democratic party can lead the nation into its third century with justice to all American people."

Conyers lauded Dellums, said he was concerned that during the Bicentennial celebration, when millions of Americans would be coming to Washington, they would not see black Americans in the Capitol Building.

Rangel added that he is working on securing permanent exhibits to be placed in the Capitol. He said he has already corresponded with the Joint Committee on Libraries who have jurisdiction over the art work in the Capitol. "As soon as we are able to jointly find appropriate works, I will be going again to the Joint Committee to urge them to place these on permanent display so that the contributions of black Americans can be properly reflected," he said.

It has long been a contention of black leaders in public office in Washington that blacks were not being treated fairly. Since the advent of the late Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr. New York Democratic representative, pressure has been applied to those in office at the White House to include more contributions of blacks.

saying he was one of the most forceful voices in opposition to the Vietnam War, a leader in the national struggle against the military-industrial complex, author of many pieces of vital social legislation, including national health insurance and reform of the federal bureaucracy, and one of those in the forefront of the Congressional and national drive to reorient federal priorities in the direction of full employment and the redistribution of opportunities and resources.

Senator Winters To Be On Commission

Senator John W. Winters has been appointed to serve on the joint committee to study salaries and other benefits for teachers and state employees. The joint committee begins its term of service immediately and terminates upon submission of its report to the General Assembly prior to convening of the 1977 session. The appointment was made by Lt. Governor James B. Hunt, Jr.

The committee will have as its primary responsibility the establishment of criteria for salary and other North Carolina teachers asked for a pay hike of 16.5 during ability, and to study resources of the state to suggest sources of additional revenue which may be necessary. North Carolina teachers asked for a pay hike of 16.5 during the second session, 1976 of the General Assembly, but were given an increase of 4 percent plus $300. The idea to establish the committee was a part of the package in Senate Bill 954 in order that State employees and teachers be assured that the General Assembly was aware of the difference between the rise in the cost of living and the pay raise given.
