

Carter Campaign Watches Ford Attack

Brown Promotes Carter Campaign

The deputy campaign manager for the Jimmy Carter for President Campaign met Oct. 19 with about 50 members of the Raleigh-Wake Citizens Association (R-WCA), assuring them of a Carter win in November and participation in the spoils - jobs, appointments and input on policy formulation and implementation.

Ben Brown, who is also a member of the Georgia House of Representatives, urged blacks to get out the biggest vote possible. Brown said the Carter-Mondale ticket was a "vehicle to improve the lives of the people we represent." To achieve better housing, medical care, jobs and participation in the political process the articulate legislator urged the biggest vote possible from blacks, saying that participation in the spoils would be directly related to votes cast for Carter.

Brown discounted apathy among black voters as a result of the defeat of Howard Lee in his bid for the Lt. governor's seat. "I want to assure you that there may be apathy in the minds of some 'leaders,' but there is no apathy with those people who are paying high prices for food and those people who can't get health care and those people who are out of jobs," Brown said. He said that rather, there is a quiet enthusiasm manifested in a "I'm going to get it syndrome" which he said must be celebrated.

Lottery Seen As Racial

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congressman Patten J. Mitchell (D-Md.) has accused the Maryland State Lottery Agency of discriminating against its black employees. "The picture of black employment in the agency is grim," Mitchell said, "and it has been grim since 1973."

Suspect Twice In 2 Months

A young Raleigh youth who just cannot seem to stop running from the highway patrol was shot Sunday as an officer tried to "club" him with a .357 Magnum revolver after a chase of about 250 yards through a wooded area. The incident was the second brush with the highway patrol that James Walker Harris has had in five weeks. On Sept. 19, he was pursued from downtown Raleigh to part of suburban Wake County by a contingent of Raleigh city police and highway patrol members.

Highway patrol Sgt. A. H. Campbell said that Harris was driving a 1969 Pontiac GTO when Patrolman D. L. Hawkins noticed the car's inspection sticker was expired. The patrolman started towards Harris' car and Harris backed down the road that he was traveling. After a short pursuit, patrol officials said Harris got out of his car and ran through a wooded area. The patrolman followed, catching Harris after about 250 yards.

Sgt. Campbell said Harris was then arrested for driving under the influence of alcoholic beverages, but before he could be taken in, he picked up a 2-foot oak stick and hit the patrolman on his right upper forearm. The patrolman was then said to have pulled his .357 service revolver and as he attempted to club Harris with the gun, the gun discharged, wounding Harris in the neck.

Harris was listed in serious condition Monday in the intensive care unit of the Wake Medical Center. He was not allowed to talk to reporters.

On Sept. 19, Harris was pursued by law enforcement officers in another incident when B. F. Williams of the Raleigh Police Dept., said he noticed the inspection sticker was expired on the GTO, tried to pull Harris over to the curb and Harris sped away. The chase was joined by Highway Patrol Sgt. "Billy" Daye, and other officers who chased the man 14 miles from downtown Raleigh to suburban Wake County. (See YOUTH, P. 2)

Media Stories Note Trouble

CHARLOTTE (CCNS) — A deputy who witnessed the beating of a black inmate by two other deputies at the Mecklenburg County Jail several weeks ago, was ordered to "turn in his gear" by the Mecklenburg County sheriff, Donald Stahl.

George Phillips, the deputy, had reported the beating of Gregory Taylor, age 20, to the news media. Taylor, who was awaiting a second trial for murder after his original conviction had been set aside because of judicial error, has a history of mental problems and has been in and out of mental institutions for the past several years. Phillips' report resulted in an investigation into the beating and a civil rights suit filed by Taylor for violation of his civil rights against the sheriff and the two deputies who administered the beating.

Taylor was allegedly beaten unconscious and thrown into solitary confinement by deputy. (See DEPUTY, P. 2)

Black Appointees Make Political Year's Pawns

A political leaflet that lauds the appointment of blacks and native Americans by Republican Gov. James Holshouser has some Democrats miffed and others surprised. The handbill is being distributed throughout the state by Republicans who are campaigning hard for the election of Ford for President, David Flaherty for Governor and Asa Spaulding, Jr. for Secretary of State. Spaulding, the only black candidate running for major statewide office, is a Republican and opposes Democratic

Campaign Battles Increase

Dirty tricks have crept into political contest in eastern North Carolina during the past week. An investigation is being made to find out who the responsible parties are.

The North Carolina Attorney General's office is investigating the distribution of racist propaganda in eastern North Carolina which Jimmy Carter staffers think is aimed at inciting a racist vote against the Georgia peanut farmer and Democratic presidential candidate.

Carter staffer Cher Brooks said that two pieces of propaganda were being mailed to homes in eastern counties. One piece made references to the fact that Carter's staff employed black women and the other was a statement by Republican candidate for the (See CARTER, P. 2)

Supt. Opposes Busing

WASHINGTON — Washington's school superintendent Vincent E. Reed said recently that he is against busing black children from the District of Columbia to majority white schools in nearby suburbs.

"I don't think it's necessary for black children to be with white children in order to achieve quality education," said Reed, who heads the nation's most heavily black big city school system, in a question and answer period following a speech at the National Press Club. "I don't think many black parents believe that good education (See BUSING, P. 2)

Little Trial Helpful

Durham attorney Karen Galloway was cited "Lawyer of the Year" by the National Conference of Black Lawyers at its weekend convention in Detroit, Mich.

"They cited in their response to why me for Lawyer of the Year, my work on JoAnne Little's case and also the other cases that are similar to JoAnne's that people don't hear about and my continuous struggle in the legal profession," Ms. Galloway said. She was co-counsel for the defense in the JoAnne Little murder trial of a Beaufort County jailer. Ms. Little was acquitted by one of the most elaborate criminal defenses in the country.

The National Conference of Black Lawyers (NCBL) has bestowed the award since 1971 to lawyers representing the ideals "that NCBL stands for - that is the elimination of racism in our society," Ms. Galloway said. The organization, while national in scope, has been active in North Carolina. Much of the legal support before and after the JoAnne Little trial came from NCBL. NCBL provided legal assistance to 37 inmates after (See LAWYER, P. 2)
