Bus Shelters, Dispatch Facility Planned At Mall

Though the knowledge would not have meant much to Raleigh bus riders last week, they will eventually be able to wait for their busses during inclement weather without wondering if the City of Raleigh thinks they are ducks. The city is planning to construct shelters and a dispatch facility on the Downtown Mall at the present central transfer point on Martin Street. City Transit Planner Bob Olson said the shelter will extend to the several boarding points immediately on both sides of the mall. When all this will take place, however, remains to be seen. The city has requested state and federal funding to help complete the project and is waiting upon response from these sources. The state's response is tied to Sen. John Winters' Senate Bill 656. Winters said the bill is in the Senate Appropriations Committee. It includes $375,000 for completion of the mall, with the city dividing the funding among the various projects on its drawing boards, such as the bus riders' shelters. Appropriations will be among the last matters decided in this session of the General Assembly, Winters said. The almost 6,000 daily bus riders will get more immediate protection from the elements at points other than the central transfer point, however. Olson said the Capital Area Transit system has received 16 shelters which have been designed for key boarding and unloading points throughout the city.

Amin Banned From Summit

National Black News Service
LONDON — Ugandan President Idi Amin will not be allowed to attend a Commonwealth summit in London, it has been reported. Government sources said it is Amin to come to London for which coincides with celebrations marking Queen Elizabeth II's 25th reigning year. Amin said some time ago that he wants to replace the Queen as head of the British Commonwealth.

Name Black FCC Head, NAACP Tells Carter

NEW YORK, N. Y. — The NAACP last week called on President Carter to appoint a minority person as chairman of the Federal Communications Commission. In a telegram to the President, NAACP administrator Gloster B. Current said that: "The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in view of pending appointment of Chairman of Federal Communications Commission, urgently requests that you give favorable consideration to the appointment of a minority member as chairman of this vital regulatory agency."

HANAFIS ARRIVE FOR TRIAL — Washington — Abdul Aziz, son-in-law of Hanafi leader Hamasa Abdul Khaalis, and two Hanafi women, arrive at D.C. Superior Court May 31 to attend the trial of Khaalis and 11 other Hanafi Muslims for the murder of a reporter and the taking of 149 hostages in the March seizure of three Washington Buildings. Aziz did not take part in the seizure. (UPI)

Coveted NAACP Award

A. Haley Wins Spingarn Medal To Be Given June 29

NEW YORK — Alex Haley, author of the best-seller Roots, has been named winner of the 62nd Spingarn Medal. The award will be presented during the Youth Night program on Wednesday, June 29, at the annual convention in St. Louis. In announcing the selection, Mrs. Margaret Bush Wilson, chairman of the NAACP National Board of Directors, noted that Mr. Haley is being cited for, among other things, "his unsurpassed effectiveness in portraying the legendary story of every American of African descent." The rest of the NAACP citation lauds him for providing a "graphic perspective to historic black-white relationships," his "narrative power" (See HALEY WINS, P. 2)

Barber Target Of Suit

CONCORD — A 33-year-old black assistant professor at Barber-Scott College here, has accused a white barber of discrimination because they refused to cut his hair last week. However, Donald H. Whitley, the white owner of the barber shop, says that the barbers who work for him do not know how to cut a black person's hair. David Panyaka, a native of Kenya, has filed suit under the Civil Rights Act of 1968 against Whitley and Whitley's Barber Shop, alleging he denied a hair cut because of his race. According to Panyaka, he was doing his laundry, when he decided to go next door and make an appointment for a hair cut. "There were two barbers in the shop," Panyaka declared. "One of them said, 'We cut hair for the white race only.'"

WLLE Could Lose Its FCC License

According to a report released last week, the Federal Communications Commission, headquartered in Washington, D. C., is expected to rule "in three or four months" on whether to revoke the license of Radio Station WLLE in Raleigh on charges of fraudulent billing procedures. The FCC has one black member, Benjamin F. Hooks. If the FCC revokes the license, the black-oriented radio station would be forced off the air. Last year, the radio station was ordered to pay a $10,000 fine by FCC administrative law judge Ernest Nash after he ruled that it falsely billed advertisers in violation of commission rules. The FCC Broadcast Bureau, however, contended that the fine was not a strong enough penalty and asked the full commission to revoke the license of WLLE. Arguments in the case were heard by the commission last Thursday, at which time a representative of the station's ownership is alleged to have admitted, "We were wrong," but said the problems have been cleared up. Insurance On Crime Is Urged

National Black News Service
NEW YORK, N. Y. — Businessmen in high-crime areas were urged recently by the Black-Jewish Information Center here to look into the Federal Crime Insurance Program, which offers low-cost protection against property loss resulting from robbery and burglary. "Over the years, we've witnessed many communities deteriorate because their businesses were unable to secure crime insurance," said James Rose, an official at Federal Crime Insurance. "The program makes crime insurance more readily available in areas where shopkeepers and other entrepreneurs have been unable to buy or retain such protection." The program is administered (See INSURANCE, P. 2)

Three Readers Win Week's Appreciation

Three readers of THE CAROLINIAN last week received $10 checks each after they reported to the newspaper that they had seen their names in advertisements on the Appreciation Money Page on the back of the front section of the paper. The readers were: Mrs. Pauline Ramsour, of Washington. (See APPRECIATION, P. 2)

Woman Charged In Death

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — Just as he said in life that he wanted to be "clean" so the girls would swoon over him as he walked the streets of South Philadelphia, that happened at a local funeral parlor as soon as the news reached the community that he had been slain by his girlfriend, whose name is unknown. She was charged with murder Tuesday night after surrendering to police. Last week, Tyrone Everett was the sports idol of South Philly, until his body was removed to the Buluh Baptist Church, 1909 Bainbridge St., where the funeral was held Wednesday. Tyrone was the hope of Philly for a new champion since he came so close to winning the world junior lightweight championship, in what many say he should have been the winner. It was rumored that he had been signed for another chance at the title and vowed to win it. He was killed Thursday in a house believed to have been occupied by his girlfriend at 2710 Federal St. Tyrone is said to have been born and raised in the same community. He gained the respect of the other boys, according to his brother, because he wielded a big fist. Witnesses said that the woman and a man were seen leaving the house shortly after the blasts were heard. The two had not been seen or heard from when a CAROLINIAN representative visited the area last Friday. (See BOXER SHOT, P. 2)

'Bull City' Female Is Insulting

DURHAM — With raging remorse and indignant expression, Mrs. Evelyn Watson Clements told a representative of THE CAROLINIAN Tuesday, in a special interview arranged by the office of the Durham County Sheriff, that she did not have a damn thing to tell a black newspaperman. The small 26-year-old woman is being held in the Durham County Jail in the fatal shooting of Jesse Daniel Smith, 36, while he was believed to have been fleeing from her wrath, while two children, in the car with her, looked on. The interview was desired in order to give the public her version of what caused her to draw a .32-caliber gun on Smith, after it is said that he was talking with her from her car. The victim is alleged to have become disenchanted with the way she was acting and decided to flee from her presence. It was then that she is alleged to have fired two shots into the back of his body as he ran and fell fatally wounded. The accused woman has been in the Durham County Jail since May 24, after she was apprehended by local police. She is said to have had the gun when officers overtook her a short distance from where the man was shot. When this newspaperman entered the jail on the fourth floor of the courthouse after the sheriff's office had notified the matron that he was coming to see Mrs. Clements, he was directed to a conference table and she was notified that she was wanted. Upon her arrival, the newspaperman identified himself and told (See BULL CITY, P. 2)

8 Blacks Cited By USDA

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland presented the Superior Service award, the Department's second highest honor, to eight black employees last week. Honored were: Ernest Brazzle, an extension agent in Shelby county, Tenn.; Mrs. Anita B. Brown, a supervisory assistant, Washington, D. C.; E. Ernest Ford, personnel management specialist, Berkeley, Calif.; Mrs. Fannie M. Harrell, biological laboratory, St. Paul, Minn.; Ms. Mary E. Manigault, women's program coordinator, New York City; William M. Mills, extension agent, Wayne, Mich.; Robert L. Quinchett, data systems executive, Washington, D. C. and Mrs. Eula C. Taylor, program data specialist, Kansas City, Mo. Describing the honorees as typical civil servants, Secretary Bergland extended his "sincere congratulations for a job extremely well done." The blacks were among 81 USDA employees and 17 organizational units cited at the Department's 31st Annual Honor Awards program held (See 8 CITED, P. 2)

A Recantation And An Apology

The May 26 issue of THE CAROLINIAN carried an article written by James A. Shepard entitled, "Keep Blacks Off UNC Board of Governors." The article was based upon an editorial allegedly carried by or sent to 17 N.C. dailies, including the Raleigh Times and the Raleigh News and Observer and one Virginia daily. This editorial was racially-biased and slanted. Information has come to us from the Raleigh Times and the News and Observer that neither of them printed the editorial in question. Both THE CAROLINIAN and James A. Shepard regret the mistake of erroneously accusing the Times and the Observer and apologize to those 2 newspapers, in view of the denials of the Times and the Observer and the full acceptance of this denial by the writer of the article and by THE CAROLINIAN, and our apologies to those Raleigh newspapers, we believe it to be proper at this time to publicly state that if any or all of the other 15 newspapers were wrongly accused, we also apologize to them at this time.

Rites Held For NC Woman, 101

REX, N.C. — Even though relatives of Mrs. Foddie J. McEachern told THE CAROLINIAN that she would be on hand for her 102nd birthday, after she read its account of her 101st birthday, earlier this year, she succumbed at her home May 21, about three months after she read the story.
