

1 Man Bound Over In Sex Case Here

Male Soliciting Charged

Wake District Court Judge George R. Greene earlier this week bound over Larry (Peaches) McEachern, 23, of 1517 E. Jones St. for a probable cause hearing set for Oct. 5 on charges of "soliciting to commit a crime against nature."

Greene Issues Ruling

McEachern and several other black Raleigh men were arrested last week, with McEachern becoming a key person in the Raleigh Police Department's effort to curtail alleged male prostitution near the intersection of Harrington and Hillsborough Sts.

Greene dismissed McEachern's case, however, because of an improper warrant. With a new warrant, McEachern was brought back before Greene and was bound over for a hearing.

Baptists Call For Action

Jackson Talks On Marching

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — The presidents of the National Baptist Convention said here last week that "marching on the picket line has value and has done much to impress many who would not be moved otherwise." The convention, which began here on Sept. 8, drew thousands to this resort city.

As Dr. J. H. Jackson delivered his annual address, however, he also said, "Marching on the picket line, at best, creates an opportunity for one to engage more fully in the cultural, economic, and political life of the nation. But for self-improvement and for participating in correcting the ills of one's society or community, we must recommend and find the production line, the purchasing line, the political-power line and the patriotic practice line."

He was specific in his support of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He warned that blacks must not create false hopes or inflame young minds as blacks seek to correct the wrongs in the country.

Council Hopefuls Comment

Strong community-based crime prevention programs are the answers to crime in the black community, according to several of the candidates running for the District C seat on the Raleigh City Council.

Candidate Lawrence Dickens advocates the development of a "brothers' keeper" attitude in the black community. "We need community involvement where we start being our 'brothers' keeper,'" Dickens said, suggesting that is the primary way to reduce both crime against property and against persons.

Persons prone to commit crimes against property and other people need to know that "eyes" are on them, he said, suggesting that this would not make the community crime proof, but would be effective in crime reduction.

As a councilperson, he said he would push community watch programs and related community oriented programs designed to reduce crime, and would also push for maintaining a higher Special Services Division budget for the Raleigh Police Department, noting that this division is directly involved with the type programs involving community participation with police in crime reduction.

Candidate George Handy said he would push for a combination of increased police presence and community watch programs.

MAYOR COLEMAN YOUNG IS VICTORIOUS — Detroit — Incumbent Mayor Coleman A. Young, 59, gives his victory speech after winning the primary election for mayor in the nation's 6th largest city Sept. 13. Mayor Young will run for re-election against City Councilman Ernest C. Browne, Jr., in the November election, the first general election for mayor in the city's history where both candidates are black. (UPI)

Knight, Peebles At Odds

BY WILLIE WHITE, Staff Writer

A challenger and the incumbent for the Raleigh District C City Council seat have locked horns in battle over who should get credit for projects in which both played a part, one as a member of the Raleigh Planning Commission and the other as a member of the City Council.

The conflict started when incumbent Bill Knight's campaign office released a campaign flyer in which were listed "50 reasons to re-elect Bill Knight." On the list are items which Knight indicates he supported during his 2nd term.

But challenger Millard Peebles, former chairperson of the Planning Committee, is "taking exception" to what he (Knight) is trying to get credit for. I was closer at hand in most of that stuff that he is coming up with. I just want the people to know where he is. He is coming in second fiddle."

'Tests Rigged' Official

GREENSBORO — "The system involving the use of standardized tests is designed against the poor," an official of the national Educational Testing Service said at A&T State University last week.

He was Dr. Joseph Williams, a program administrator for ETS in Princeton, N. J.

"There are no experts on standardized tests," Williams said in his address to the Greensboro community.

CHIEF OF STATE TO VISIT — Lagos, Nigeria — Nigeria's Chief of State, Lt. Gen. Olusegun Obasanjo, will visit Washington next month — the first Nigerian leader to do so, the government said Sept. 12. Former chief of staff of the Armed Forces, Obasanjo, 39, has ruled Nigeria — the world's 7th largest oil exporter and Africa's richest and most populous country — since Murtala Muhammed was killed in an abortive coup Feb. 13 last year. Carter Administration 'Lacks Commitment' Ben Chavis

OXFORD — Rev. Benjamin Chavis, 10, a student, issued a statement calling on people of conscious throughout the nation to speak out for the freedom of the Wilmington 10. Saying the Wilmington 10 case "exposes the lack of commitment by the Carter Administration to protect human rights of all Americans," Rev. Chavis called last Friday for nationwide demonstrations Sept. 17 at Democratic Party headquarters around the country.

Sept. 17 demonstrations are being coordinated by the National Alliance Against Racist and Political Repression (See REV. CHAVIS, P. 10)

In Chatham County History Museum Dedicated

PITTSBORO — Pat Bryant, a founder and editor of the Carolina Community News Service, spoke at the dedication of a Black History Museum by the Chatham County Fair in Pittsboro last week. The program was a presentation of the youth division of the fair to honor the late Charlie Baldwin, described as a "tireless worker for the fair" in the past. Baldwin was credited with procuring the slave cabin which will now serve as a museum on the fairground site.

The cabin, donated by Willis Wrenn, on whose property it stood, is an authentic, hand-crafted 19th century dwelling. Wrenn, president of the local Farm and Home Organization and chairman of the Museum Committee, supervised the transfer and reconstruction of the cabin. Artifacts and furnishings were obtained through the efforts of the Pittsboro and Siler City Chapters of the North Carolina Federation of Negro Women.

Descendants of the Milligans, builders and original inhabitants of the cabin, still reside in the area and were present at the dedication. They assisted J. E. Ramsey, Jr., chairman of the Piedmont Council on Performing Arts, in drawing up genealogy of the family.
