WIN Program Puts 203,000 In Jobs

WASHINGTON, D. C. — More than 203,000 welfare recipients found unsubsidized jobs through the Work Incentive (WIN) program in the first nine months of fiscal year 1977 — producing estimated savings in public welfare costs of $455 million.

Almost half — 94,000 — of the new job holders were earning enough to enable them and their families to leave welfare. The other newly employed WIN program participants, whose earnings weren't enough for them to leave welfare immediately, continue to receive some assistance, but at a reduced level.

Placement of the 203,000 WIN registrants in welfare grant reductions of more than $300 million in the nine-month period. Additional savings in Food Stamp and Medicaid costs brought total reductions in public expenditures for welfare to approximately $455 million for the nine-month period.

Average hourly starting pay for men entering employment from the WIN program was $3.70; for women it was $2.73, or about 75 percent of men's wages. In the mainstream

FSU In Controversy

Lyons, Others Involved

FAYETTEVILLE — Even though Dr. Charles Lyons, Jr., chancellor of Fayetteville State University, and C.J. Barber, chairman of the school's trustee board, are reported as feeling that the affairs of the school are in good shape and the echoes and reechoes are just the opposite, alumni, some of the staff, some of the faculty, some of the students and friends are deeply concerned.

The reported unrest became more visible when the alleged controversy over the usurpation of administrative power, between vice chancellor De-Field Holmes and the alleged designated head of continuing education, Dr. Dickens, was aired at a meeting of consultant trustees and members of the board of governors, with President William C. Friday, in Chapel Hill, Nov. 10. The matter was not resolved there. It is reported as having been heard by the executive committee of FSU, Feb. 15.

It was also reported that the matter remained unresolved, due to the fact that Dr. Dickens made some mandatory demands that the administration felt needed further study. It was also reported that some race might be lost, which could (See FSU IS, P. 2)

Blacks Are Not In Art Work

National Black News Service WASHINGTON, D. C. — Works of art portraying black Americans are scarce on Capitol Hill, but two congressmen think Congress can do something about it.

U. S. Rep. William R. Cotter (D-Conn.), who is white, and Charles B. Rangel (D-N.Y.), a former chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, have proposed that Congress commission a painting of the Rhode Island Regiment, one of the few black units to serve in the American Revolution.

Rangel, who last year denounced the "underrepresentation and offensive portrayal of black Americans" in U. S. Capitol art work, joined Cotter at a press conference recently to support the efforts of a Connecticut artist, David Wagner, to paint a representation of the black regiment for the building.

Of the nearly 700 works of art in the Capitol, only five portray black subjects, the two congressmen said. In most of these, the subjects either are unidentified or depicted as servants.

Only one painting portrays a black in a heroic role, a martyr of the Boston Massacre, but this is displayed out of public view in a committee

Final Rites Held For Mrs. D. Walls

YONKERS N. Y. — Mrs. Dorothy Jordan Walls, widow of Bishop W. J. Walls, known to many as "Mr. AME Zion Church," suffered a heart attack at her home, 72 Acqueduct St. Tuesday, Nov. 15 and died in a local hospital on Wednesday, Nov. 16. She was interred at Greater Walters AME Zion Church, 8422 S. Damen Ave., Chicago Saturday, Nov. 19 at 1 p.m.

Her death was a shock to AME Zion church circles. Even though she was hospitalized before his death in 1974, she appeared to have regained her health and was writing a book on his life, which was said to be about ready to give to the printers.

They were married in November of 1956. She was 28 and he was 72. However, the difference in their ages did not deter them in making a happy home or making a greater contribution to the AME Zion Church and to the world of
