Cursed 2 Teachers: Foxwell

BY CHARLES R. JONES
Managing Editor

George L. Foxwell, veteran educator and principal of the Fred J. Carnegie Junior High School here for the past several years, told a representative of The CAROLINIAN in an interview Wednesday morning that he had expelled a white student at the school last week after the 16-year-old youth cursed two teachers, threw a textbook at him and struck him on the shoulder with his open hand and "tried to initiate a fight with me in front of his parents."

Foxwell also signed an assault warrant against George David Turnage, of the Methodist Home for Children. Mr. Foxwell, former assistant principal at the J. W. Ligon Senior High School under the late Herbert Elliott Brown, said young Turnage "had used grossly profane language while in the presence of the school's white librarian and a white female science teacher on Tuesday of last week. "I informed the student by bringing his parents when he reported to school the next morning, which he did." The principal stated that while the librarian was in-

Work Conditions, Policy Challenged

TILLERY — On Thursday, April 20, hundreds of inmates at Caledonia Prison Farm here allegedly refused to go to work - in the cannery, in the laundry, the kitchen and the fields. The work-stoppage grew out of dissatisfaction with working conditions at Caledonia, and out of massive resistance to a change in policy that will significantly restrict inmate visiting privileges.

Dr. Clark Tutor Of The Yr.

DURHAM — The Pre-Professional Health Society of North Carolina Central University presented its Teacher Of The Year Award to Dr. Vernon Clark, associate professor of biology at NCCU, at its first annual banquet on April 14. The membership of this organization is composed of students interested in the health professions. Many black health professionals from the Durham, Chapel Hill, and Raleigh areas were in attendance. Upon presentation of the award, the NCCU biologist received a standing ovation. Dr. Thomas E. Malone, deputy director of The National Institute of Health was the main speaker for the occasion.

President Of NUL Speaker

CHAPEL HILL — Vernon E. Jordan, Jr., president of the National Urban League, with headquarters in New York City, told an audience at the University of North Carolina here last week that "North Carolina's image as a liberal state has been tarnished by the Wilmington Ten case and the University of North Carolina's desegregation case."

Delivering the first in a series of Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial lectures, Mr. Jordan said the Tarheel State picked up the liberal image because of a comparison with other states in the South not going along with the remainder of the country.

"There is a broad national consensus," Jordan said, "that the Wilmington Ten were convicted, despite flimsy evidence, unreliable witnesses and a questionably conducted trial."

Jordan continued, "I believe the Wilmington Ten are innocent of any criminal actions. I believe that they are now in jail because they are the black victims of community anger."

The dispute between the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the NCCU is buried.

NCCU Educator Is Buried

DURHAM — Graveside services were held Wednesday afternoon here at Beechwood Cemetery for Dr. Ray Thompson, who was a counselor and educator at North Carolina Central University for 20 years in addition to developing guidance programs for in the public schools for the state Department of Public Instruction.

W.C.O.'s Bd. Sets Meeting

Final action on the outcome of a suspension of Ralph E. Campbell, Sr., an official of Wake County Opportunities, Inc., is not likely to be cleared up until this week, according to reliable sources.

Meeting in a session last Wednesday night, the WCO's Board of Directors was hoping to resolve the issue of the employment of Mr. Campbell, its director of operations, but were stymied in their efforts.

According to J. Mills Holloway, chairman of the board and vice president for financial affairs at St. Augustine's College here, "The board has not reached a final decision. It is expected to be reached on Wednesday, April 25 when the board meets again."

A veteran civil rights activist and political leader, Campbell was officially "relieved" of his duties without pay from Wake Opportunities in March while three charges were being investigated against him.

On Monday of last week, Mr. Campbell released to The CAROLINIAN and other news media, a letter, dated April 14 from Mr. Holloway, informing him (Campbell) that all three of the charges had been dropped against him, following an investigation by the anti-po-

EDITOR'S NOTE: This column or feature is printed in the public interest with an aim towards eliminating its contents. Numerous individuals have requested that they be given the consideration of reviewing their listing on the police blotter. This would like to do. However, it is not our position to judge or jury. We merely publish the facts as we had them reported by the arresting officers. To keep out of The Crime Beat Column, merely means not being registered by a police officer in reporting his findings while on duty. So simply keep off the "blotter" and you won't be in The Crime Beat.

FEMALE ASSAULTED

Mrs. Claudine Winree, 2516 Keith Dr., told officer Phillips that at 1200 Hardmont Dr., Apt. 1, at 2 a.m. Sunday, she was assaulted. The 23-year-old woman was allegedly struck with fists and choked, the report continued. She was treated at Wake Medical Center for bruises and released. No arrests were made in the case.
