WASHINGTON—(NBNS)—Richard Hatcher, mayor of Gary, Ind., was elected the new president of the National Conference of Black Mayors recently, as the group pledged to support President Carter's

A. J. Cooper, outgoing president of the mayor's conference, said Carter's program would be supported by black groups so long as they don't have to endure more hardship than others. Cooper, mayor of Prichard, Ala., said the anti-inflation fight is crucial to the long-term fiscal growth of financially ailing cities and towns even though it might at first, result in postponement of federal aid.

The Policemen's Institute was held in the Library Conference Room of Saint Augustine's College.

Sunday's Child

We never needed the Black church more.

Our communities are in a turmoil. The elements that destroy human lives are running rampant, plaguing our young people with crime, prostitution, drugs and lack of discipline. The greatest challenge that faces us as a people today is how to communicate a sense of moral pride to children who see so much temptation. A good place to begin is where we started almost 200 years ago. Our Church. For generations, the Black church has been a powerful influence in our lives. A place where Black people could come together to build strong moral foundations. Our parents and grandparents went to Sunday school where they learned solid values and leadership.

This country tomorrow. But if our churches are going to help our children, we have to care enough about these institutions now. We have to help them survive. The Black church needs us to come together as families, as friends, as brothers and sisters. If we care as much for our children as we say we do, we'll open the church's doors for them.

This strength brought us through slavery; led us on civil rights movements and headed local voter registration drives. Today, it can be a positive influence in our young people's lives and in our communities.
