

ANALYZING THE VOTE-N.C. Rep. Dan Blue, left, Lt. Gov. Webb confer outside the state Jackson for President headquarters last Tuesday evening as election returns were reported. (Photo by Talib Calloway)

Congressman Says Passage Of Rights Act Symbolic Victory

The 315 to 98 U.S. House of Repre- gress' and this country's commitsentatives vote recently to overturn a 1984 Supreme Court decision in Grove City College vs. Bell was the focus of a statement issued recently by Fourth District Congressman David E. Price.

"The passage of the Civil Rights Restoration Act, I believe, marks, symbolically and practically, an unmistakable reaffirmation of this Con-

Police Search For Suspect In Armed Robberv

Anyone having information regarment to civil rights and nondiscrimination," said Price. He added that the Supreme Court's decision in the Grove City case had stripped the federal government of one of its "indispensable tools" for fighting unconstitutional racial, sexual and religious discrimination.

"By effectively sanctioning discrimination by institutions receiving federal funds, the ruling put the federal government and the American taxpayer in the position of subsidizing, and hence perpetuating, these attitudes and actions," he said.

'Today, the House has seized the opportunity to renounce and remedy this unacceptable retreat in this country's battle for equality and justice," Price continued. "To me, it is remarkable only that it has taken four years for us to correct and clarify the court's clear distortion of congressional intent as spelled out in a long series of civil rights statutes." House Education and Labor Commitee chairman Augustus Hawkins

(D-Calif.) said any organization receiving federal money should be prepared to play by the rules. "Anyone who dips their hand in the public till should not mind if a little democracy sticks to their fingers," the House veteran said.

Price commented that under the court's ruling, a student's ability to sue for remedy of a violation of his civil rights would depend only upon a determination of whether or not federal funds were used to construct the building or subsidize the academic program in which the

(See RIGHTS ACT, P. 2)

Carolina," added neighbor Ted M.

"We felt that it was very, very necessary that we have some landmark," club member Inez D. Bell said by telephone recently. "There were homes like the Reid home and the Thomas home and the Hines home and the Vick home, and they were historians here in our city, neighborhood and the culture of our could save the neighborho decay proimpted a local b garden club of retired black Hooker, 69.

Black Area In Wilson Makes Historic Status

WILSON (AP)-It is a rare photograph of a black family almost a century ago. The horse stands on a dirt road; harnessed to a wagon. Children on the cart gather around a barrel, eyeing the camera. Three women with to write to city officials in 1984. serious faces and long skirts, their hair pulled back, pose in the yard. A man in a vest and bowler leans against a porch post, his hands in his pockets.

"I treasure that like I do gold," said J. Edward Farmer, 75, holding the framed photograph. The people in it include his parents and brother.

The house in the photo still stands. Its neighborhood, the East Wilson

ows Jackson He is a leader. They like his positions on the issues. He has charisma. He is the best debater. He is a proven campaigner. He makes sense. But ... Jesse Jackson collected 2.5 million votes on Super Tuesday, more than any other Democrat and enough to cause a re-examination of the conventional wisdom that a black cannot be nominated for president in the America of 1988. The 20-state primary, coupled with Jackson's performance in Vermont, Minnesota, and Maine, has chipped away some of the "but ... " in the analysis of the candidate's potential. The statement is becoming, "If ... " "If Jackson were white, I think he'd be president," says Howard University political science professor Ronald Walters, who was Jacksons deputy campaign manager in 1984 and is the author of a new book, "Black Presidential Politics in America."

Majority

"If he were white, he wouldn't be in the race," says Ben J. Wattenberg, a scholar at the American Enterprise Institute and co-editor of Public Opinion magazine.

Walters says Jackson's experience in the civil rights movement is more than the equivalent to service in legislative halls. And he cites Jackson's electrifying quality.

"Charisma-say what you will, it still counts in politics," he says. "Just

HE CAROLINIAN

ask Ronald Reagan.'

Wattenberg, on the other hand, contends that a black could be elected president in the America of 1968, but not one with Jackson's lack of ex-perience holding public office nor his controversial record.

latic Vote

Support

"Jesse Jackson went to Cuba and said, 'Viva Che Guevara,' praising a man who dedicated his life to the export of communism to South and Latin America," Wattenberg said. "Had any other politician in American life ever said anything like that, he might have been scandalized and drummed out of the race."

The question of Jackson's elec-(See JESSE JACKSON, P. 2)

IN RALEIGH 25

ELSEWHERE 30¢ VOL. 47, NO. 31

NC's Semi-Weekly RALEIGH, N.C., MONDAY DEDICATED TO THE SPIRIT OF JESUS CHRIST MARCH 14, 1988 Disgusted Outrage Arrests Stir Protests Push For

Stronger Sanctions

BY CHESTER A. HIGGINS, JR.

NNPA News Service Loudly chanting, "Namibia Must Be Free; South Africa Must Be Free," and "Hey Hey, Ho Ho, South African Apartheid's Gotta Go," nearly 1,000 picket-carrying protestors of many races and nationalities paraded near the South African Embassy in Washington, D.C. last week.

They expressed disgusted outrage over South Africa's continued oppression of its black citizens and especially that illegal government's recent restriction of all free speech and peaceful assembly, the latter leading to the arrests and brief detentions of Hope that historic preservation

icaders Bishop Desmond Tutu an Rev. Alan Boesak

Thus, the protestors, under the guidance of the Free South Africa Movement, declared that the demonstrations which began in 1984 and were staged daily for one year until the Congress passed a bill of sanctions against South Africa over the veto of President Reagan, will begin again.

and they did so much to develop our TransAfrica executive director Randall Robinson, a D.C. lawyer, that this de monstration is lared "a push for more sanctions... to serve notice we are still here and to let blacks in South Africa know we still stand with them. We are urging the Congress to pass more sanctions and (See ARRESTS, P. 21

DISCUSSING ASSIGNMENTS—Larry Williams, center, and Bill McNell, far hight, along with other members of the Wake County School Board, discuss pupil assignments for the 1988-89 school year and other business. The meeting was old in the Board Room of the Wake County Public School offices on Wake Forest ad. (Photo by Talib Calloway)

Educators Hone Skills In Assessment Program

It s your first day on the job as principal of Maplewood Elementary. Within an hour, you are faced with a call from an angry parent, a memo from the superintendent asking for information, a fight in the hallway and a telephone call from a local newspaper reporter.

Officials in 72 of North Carolina's

140 school systems would have a good idea of how well a new principal will do on his first day on the job. These school systems participate in the North Carolina Assessment Center, a program of the state Department of Public Instruction's Leadership Institute for Administrators. At the institute, potential principals are given a series of tasks and exercises simulating an actual day in the life of a school principal. At the end of the two-day exercise, participants are sed by six observers on related to being a principal. Local school systems use the assessments to help identify people who have the skills to be good principals and to help possible principals hone their skills. A portion of the assessment involves an evaluation of each participant's strengths and weaknesses, and participants receive suggestions for improving weaker areas. Dr. Kermit Buckner, director of the N.C. Assessment Center, says the assessments help potential principals improve weak areas when they still have time. "Once they become principals, they may not have the time, or it may be more difficult to find the time it takes to work on weak areas," he says. The assessment tool used in the N.C. Assessment Center is one developed in 1975 by the National Association of Secondary School Principals to identify and assess generic skills necessary to be a suc-cessful school principal. Those skills are: problem analysis, judgment, organizational ability, decisiveness, (See PRINCIPALS, P. 2) ding the identity of the suspect responsible for the robbery committed at Wendy's, 3715 Western Blvd., on March 4 should contact Crime Stoppers at 834-HELP any time.

How well do you react?

At approximately 1:15 a.m. on March 4, a black male approached employees of Wendy's as they were closing and leaving the restaurant: He displayed a silver automatic pistol and ordered the employees back into the restaurant. He took money from the safe and fied on foot. The suspect is a black male, in his late 205, 5'9"-5'11" tall, and weighs approximately 170-180 pounds. He has a medium complexion, small Afro

(See ROBBERY, P. 2)

District, will soon be on the National Register of Historic Districts-the state's first black neighborhood to receive such status.

Preservationists say they hope that the new historic designation will spur a movement to improve the area.

Farmer was born in the house in the photograph and lives there now. He recently stood in his front yard, looked down the street, and said, "It's going to be a slum. People once lived for one another. They don't have that any more.

'We don't know who our neighbors are. People going and coming, kind of like tourists."

"At one time, this was probably one of the most beautiful streets in North people." Today, residents co widespread petty crime. Rags and empty bottles lie in the streets. Most of the district's 1,277 residential properties have changed from being privately owned to being rented.

(See RARE TREASURE, P. 2)

Dissent Runs Deep Black-Jewish Blund

BY AL VORSPAN

An Analysis ouclusion of a Two-Part Series Black leadership contributed its own blunders to this mutual disaster. Instead of saying, "We understand your reaction to quotas. So, if not quotas, tell us what you will support that will work;" many black leaders made "quotas" a synonym for all affirmative action (the mirror image of the hard-line Jewish view). Instead of responding to the barrage of Jewish press releases with their own rhetorical bombs, somebody should have said, "Wait a minute. Let's sit down and hammer out a definition of affirmative action that we can both support." And bitter irony, the Reagan administration then came along and us-ed the very code word coughed up by the black-Jewish fight to try to chop down all affirmative action programs.

Wrapping themselves falsely in the manile of civil rights, the Reaganites came to defend the Constitution by came to defend the Constitution by putting an end to "reverse discrimination" and to return America to the pristine virtue of a "color-blind" society, judging every American by his or her merit. This plous stance sought to delegitimize laws which had been supported by every president since Roosevelt, which had been validated by the courts and affirmed by Congresses representing both political parties. The assault is unprecedented. The Reagan administration has moved to nullify consent decrees patiently and carefully achieved in 56 towns and counties. It has sought to weaken EEOC guidelines. It has tried to undermine Executive Order No. 112460. It has castrated the U.S. Civil Rights Commission by firing some of its members and replacing them with pro-administration idealogues, by labeling supporters of affirmative acbeling supporters of affirmative action "new racists" or the "sons of separate but equal," even comparing the supporters of affirmative action to yesterday's champions of slavery. Not only has the administration exploited the very language of the Jewish neo-conservative campaign against quotas, it has actively stirred black-Jewish division.

The new director of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission had the "chutzpah" to suggest that the real motive of critics who accused the commission of being a monthpiece of the White House was "anti-Semitism" because 40 of the new members of the state advisory committees are Jews.

The above sad scenario does not include all Jews-or all blacks, for that matter. Neither community is a monolith. Dissent runs deep. In affirmative action, it was the three large defense agencies-American Jewish Committee, American Jewish Congress, and Anti-Defamation League-which were the visible and vocal opponents of "quotas." The UAHC and the National Council of Jewish Women took a contrary position on one of themost celebrated affirmative action cases to go to the Supreme Court.

Has affirmative action worked? (See BLACKS, JEWS, P. 2)

ELESS PATIENT—Neward University student Ruth Auguste treats a s patient in an innevative nursing program at a medical factiny for the s in the nation's capital. "They [the homeless] need these young their bright foces and caring attitudes." says Bernadine Lacey, tor of the Howard College of Nursing project. (Photo by Marvin T. Janes)