An autopsy by the state medical examiner found that Bowen was shot at least four times and at the most five times, according to Renee Hoffman, with the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

He was shot three times in the chest, once in the head and once in the right hand. Two of the bullets that entered the chest exited the chest and back, while the bullet that struck Bowen's hand exited the hand. The bullet that entered the head and one of the bullets that entered the chest lodged in the body, the autopsy report

The grand jury's decision required the concurrence of at least 12 members, officials said. The panel was dealing with a presentment which differs from the usual format that grand juries normally use.

The grand jury members were instructed that they had broad powers to investigate the shooting and that they could call witnesses and request additional evidence. The panel was not permitted to call Morris to testify, the judge said.

There were 15 names on the witness list, including SBI agents, state troopers, Columbus County sheriff's deputies and Bolton area residents.

Development Association Head Start director and 25th Anniversary Committee chairperson for Head Start of North Carolina. "It is a program designed to benefit the entire family. We see the parent(s) as the primary educator(s) of the children and encourage parental participation in our program. If you educate the parents, you educate the children and form a positive cycle which will continue into future generations.'

The program includes dental. medical, and emotional "special" services to the Head Start child. The "special" services include providing educational facilities for the handicapped child. In January, more than 13 percent of the Head Start students were handicapped. These children have difficulties which are physical, emotional and/or mental. The Head Start program fills a need for these children which might otherwise remain unfulfilled.

Parents are involved in many of the activities enjoyed by the children, such as field trips, and are a vital program component. Many of the parents of Head Start children continue to be an active part of the organization long after their children are in public schools. Parents who entered the organization as clients have continued to become employees of the organization, and many have continued their education to become college graduates with a bright Statistics show that there are more high school graduates among the underprivileged who participate in Head Start than those who do not. Those who will celebrate this year include the 11.4 million children who have been served during the past 25 years, as well as the parents, teachers, and relatives of the students. With a projected enrollment of almost 1.5 million students nationwide for 1990, Head Start is continuing to grow and challenge the United States to provide the educational and social help that the underprivileged children must have in order to grow and become productive members of American Society.

Wake County Opportunities, Inc., a community action agency, is funded to administer the Head Start program that provides services for 457 three- and four-year-old children in target areas of Wake, Orange and Chatham counties.

Some activities planned by the Wake-Orange-Chatham Head Start program are Teacher Appreciation Day, Volunteer Recognition Awards Night, a balloon launch and an open house at each of the eight centers.

Threats Force Supremacist To Deed Wife Home

FALLBROOK, Calif. (AP)-A white separatist, who is facing a $10 million lawsuit linked to a racially motivated killing in Portland, says that several death threats and an attempt on his life have prompted him to deed his home to his wife.

Tom Metzger, founder of the White Aryan Resistance, said last Thursday that he had taken the action to ensure his wife would have a home in case he was assassinated because of the case. County records show the home was deeded to Kathleen Metzger on Feb.

Metzger said an arrow was shot into his home about a month ago, lodging into the wall two feet above the easy chair he normally occupies. A sheriff's sergeant in Fallbrook confirmed last Thursday that a report had been taken on the incident, but said the case was "basically dead" because there were no witnesses.

"I've had 50 or 60 death threats and then this high-powered arrow goes three inches into the wall," Metzger said. "I said at that time, in case I become assassinated because of this case, I want my wife to have a place to live.'

Metzger said he paid off the mortgage on the three-bedroom home about a year ago so it would be free and clear in the event of his death.

"That's the least I can do for her after all she's gone through," Met-

Moving Experiences Sometimes Produce Tax Deductions

If you made a job-related move this last year, you may be eligible for some significant itemized deductions on your federal tax return.

Some of the general qualifications for taking the deduction are:

your new main job location must be at least 35 miles farther from your former home than your old main job return), must have been employed fulltime for at least 39 weeks during the first 12 months after arriving in the area of the new job location; and, your moving expenses should have been incurred within one year from the date you first reported to work at the new location.

If you qualify, the moving expenses that are generally deductible are: house hunting trips prior to the move, but after getting the new job;

most expenses of selling or buying a home, or settling or getting a lease; meals (limited to 80 percent), and lodging while in temporary housing at the new location;

· moving personal items and household goods; and.

Viable Program Extends Community GED Classes

During the month of March there is a special effort made on the behalf of literacy programs to attract the attention of those individuals that are in need of a high school diploma, GED or just to learn to read for enjoyment.

ANITA PEARSON

One such program has been in our community for many years and has continued to expand and grow into many segments of society.

The Wake Technical College Literacy Program has been a viable force in the community in formulating those literacy classes that are most needed by those that did not have the chance to finish high

According to Ms. Paula Montegue, who is the Assistant Coordinator at the Broughton Adult Education Center, the students that come to Broughton's classes are so impressive, because it takes a very smart person to try to make it when they cannot read and decide to do something about it.

Ms. Montegue said that when they enter class they are hesitant at first because they feel as if they cannot make it. But after they've been there a few days they begin to look different, act different and really begin to work. When asked why, as a single woman, she enjoyed her job, Ms. Montegue pointed out that she loves helping people. Having worked in a similiar recruiting position before. She admitted enjoying watching the positive changes that happen to her students as they begin to acquire the knowledge necessary to obtain the high school diploma.

Also working in the same program with Ms. Montegue is Mrs. Anita Pearson, who moved here with her husband Lt. Colonel Alonzo Pearson from Orangeburg, S.C. Mr. Pearson is head of ROTC at St. Augustine's College. Anita, as she likes to be called, is literacy recruiter/retention specialist and coordinator of compensory ed. (a program for adults with mental retardation.) Her p.m. - 9:30 p.m. job is one that she loves. Currently she works with organizations and agencies to help them develop classes for adults who wish to continue their education.

The difference in what Ms. Montegue does and what Mrs. Pearson does is that at the Broughton Adult Center, students attend the onsite classes four nights per week. A minimum of four courses must be taken to graduate and each course is worth one unit of Adult High School credit. Nine credits are needed to graduate and upon completion an Adult High School Diploma is issued. Whereas in the GED classes, only two nights per week are required and your progress is monitored by tests periodically and your graduation depends solely on your ability to pass the state GED test administered by Wake Technical College.

One thing both ladies specified is that the classes are geared toward adults ages 18 and over because they do not wish to encourage high school drop-outs. They are also thrilled at the prospects of reaching more people in the community to let them cnow of the availability of classes students and ciasses are available for all ages. People that have a wide range of abilities and continue to read are able to pass the test faster.

This is a free opportunity to get an education. It's out there for the taking. Both Mrs. Pearson and Ms. Montegue emphasized the fact that the classes are convient to most people and the confidence they share in the effectiveness of the program.

The teachers are well trained, the materials for classes are among the best in the nation. Also, it was plain to see that training for everyone is intensive. There are more checks and balances so that those that are supervisors will be able to give the teachers more support.

There are classes for those that speak other languages and wish to learn English and a Spanish GED

In the efforts to educate, the students are given extra help in that they remain in contact with teachers and other personnel if they have to leave class for any reason. It is the aim of all classes to make sure that a 100 percent attendance rate is maintained.

Listed below are the class sites that are continuous in their enrollment and support of the adult education classes. These are class in the city of Raleigh. You may contact Wake Technical College for classes that are being held in the county.

Between 1983 and 1988, the lives of 1,011 children under the age of five were saved by car safety seats, according to government statistics. It is estimated that another 1,980 children in the same age group might have been saved over the past five years had they been in a properly installed and adjusted car safety seat.

Buckle up

Children need extra protection while traveling in a car, beginning with that first trip home from the hospital. According to the United States Department of Transportation (DOT), small children are safest in a car when properly buckled in a child safety seat fastened in the rear seat of the vehicle.

But a safety seat is only as useful as you make it. Kinder-Care, the nation's leading provider of proprietary child care, has more than 20 years of experience working with children, and suggests the following when choosing a safety seat:

 Buy and use only child safety seats that meet DOT requirements. Look for a label on the seat that states this fact. Also, make sure the seat was manufactured after January 1, 1981, when standards for safety seats were changed.

Always select a seat that fits your child. Ask to place your child in the seat to see if he/she is comfortable and that the harness fits snugly.

King Committee member Metoka Trice shared her observations. "We al. can relate to having our names permanently recorded in history. One of the appealing features of this memorial wall is that it gives us the opportunity to buy bricks in the name and memory of loved ones who have passed on. Also, many people are buying bricks in the name of their children and grand-children. I think it's wonderful" trip? Does the safety bar clear the roof of the car when raised?

Your child's size and weight determine the type of child safety seat you

From birth to 12 months or 20pounds—use an infant seat facing the rear; nine months to four years (20-40 ounds)—use a toddler seat facing front; four-year to eight-year-olds (40-70 pounds)—keep children in convertible or toddler seats as long as they will fit. Then move to a booster seat that positions the lap belt across the child's hips and does not ride up across the stomach. The shoulder belt should be tucked behind the child if it crosses the face or the front of the neck. If a lap/shoulder belt is not available, use a shield-type booster seat restrained by a lap belt.

Know the facts

Most importantly, realize that an dult cannot safely hold a child during collision. Even at 30 mph, an infant is julled away with a 300-pound force.

Also, after plucing a child in a car seat, don't forget to buckle yourself in too! Seatbelts double your ability to survive a crash and using them sets a great example for children to follow.
