OCRACOKES' CHARM DRAWS MANY TOURISTS

Ocracoke. — A good many people of Washington, D. C., have discovered the vacation charms of Ocracoke Island. Several families have made the trip by boat from Washington, D. C., to Norfolk, and thence by car or bus to Manteo and Hatteras. Those with 4-wheel-drive jeeps have made good use of the Hatteras Inlet ferry and continued down the beach or sandy road to Ocracoke Village; those without 4-wheel-drives have wisely chosen to park their cars at Hatteras and come down with Charlie McWilliams on the mailboat and mailtruck.

In addition to bringing their jeeps, two of the Washington families have had sailboats on Silver Lake Harbor here at Ocracoke, and a short stretch of mooring space is appropriately dubbed "Washington Cove." Staying at the Lambert Cottage the past two weeks were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Runyon and children, John, Nina, and Ann, with their guests Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wyman and daughter, Jane, of Great Barrington, Massachusetts. Another Washington family, Mr. and Mrs. Wymberly Coerr and children, Susan and Stanton, spent the two weeks at Wahab Village Hotel. Two family groups from the National Capital, Mrs. Charles Owsley and children, Mary Bett, Keith, Rodney, and Scott were at Sound Front Inn; also there were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lewis of Washington, D. C.

The advantages of bringing a 4-wheel-drive jeep to the Island are many—daily trips to the Ocean Beach, straight across from the Village, or to Ocracoke Inlet three miles South, or North sixteen miles to Hatteras Inlet, with opportunities to see many of the famous wrecks—the Ghost Ship, the George A. Wells, en route, or to gather shells or climb the dunes, and the opportunity too to drive to points of interest in Ocracoke Village.

ONE GOOD REASON

Now, we know of at least one reason why there has been a consistent ammunition shortage in Korea during the past several months. According to Pentagon records, last year's steel strike created a shortage of ammunition heavier than 50 caliber. The Truman Administration occupied a strange role in the drama—that of trying to prosecute a war, while at the same time aiding and abetting those who were making the prosecution of that war doubly difficult.
