OUR GLORIOUS ROADSIDES

The roadsides in the South Albemarle have never been more beautiful at this time of the year in my recollection. I travel through them several days a week and the colors of the dying leaves now excell even our mountainsides.

The sunsets have been magnificent in their coloring these November days, particularly when viewed across the water. It's an inspiring view when one may ride facing it in the evening, as may be done in going to Columbia, or to Swan Quarter from the east.

I wish every person in our land could ride these highways and view the glory of our Southern Albemarle Roadsides before their brilliance is gone, and the branches become bare of their beauty.

The past week has witnessed the finest stretch of autumn weather for the time of year in my recollection. They have been wonderful days. It seems every time I pull out some winter clothes, the weather turns warm. It's like putting on a newly-pressed suit. Then it rains.
