

THE HIGHER THE FEWER
There's Always Plenty of Room At The Top
By NANCY J. MIDGETT

In the month of January, in the year of Our Lord, 1955, two important events took place in the life of yours truly, N.J.M.

The more important, and the event that comes in the "higher" category was that of my being granted citizenship as an American citizen. This had followed much thought on my part and the necessary time on the part of the authorities but I feel it was something I wanted to do and should do in view of the fact that I shall, as far as I know and plan, be living in this country for the remainder of my dotage. It is not that I have any dislike for either my native country, countrymen or its ways. I still love it and all my good friends there as anyone will find the place of their birth, in fact it was the fact that I liked and knew my part of it and a few other parts so well that made me feel I wanted to go abroad and see if other places were just as comfortable and the folks as easy to get along with. Apart from some localized habits that one finds in any country, a general ability to enjoy the moment with not too much thought to the future, more than I find in my own folk, and of course the vastness of the country

WANCHESE PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Daniels, Sr. visited their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Daniels, Jr. in Elizabeth City.

Mrs. Louisa Williams has returned from visiting Mr. and Mrs. Irving Williams in Norfolk.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Daniels of Columbia visited relatives here.

Mrs. Dewey Tillett was in Elizabeth City Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Creef and son Lester Lee of Norfolk visited Mrs. Lucy Midgett.

"Buster" Daniels of Norfolk visited Mr. and Mrs. Kalb Daniels.

Miss Ola Tillett is recovering after being a patient in De Paul Hospital, Norfolk, and will return home today.

compared with the British Isles, I find little difference in people, once you get down to rock bottom, and find great joy in the living I have done in this country.

The second event is of no great importance to others than myself and my sister-in-law, Rosalene who, I think, isn't quite sure yet that I'm safe to be around. It all started Saturday afternoon when I was cleaning up the house. When picking up and brushing off the lounge seat cushions and brushing under same, what should I find but a cigar; goodness only knows who it belonged to but I looked at it, turned it over in my hand, and gave way to the whisper of the gremlin in my ear that I should smoke it. I had never smoked a cigar and wondered if they were as strong as they smelled and thought, "Well, this as good a time as any to find out,"—so I lit up, and knowing more or less what Rosalene's reaction would be, strolled out on the back porch and into the back yard where she was working. She looked up, turned white, and squeaked, and on recovering the use of her voice, bawled out, "For Heaven's sake, Nancy, Crighton Midgett, (a sure sign of displeasure) have you lost your senses?"—and more—and more. Every time she goes down town now, I suggest she bring me a cegar; after all, candy does get monotonous.

Seriously though, I don't advise anyone else to try the darned things. Blowing good money, that could be used for useful and necessary things, up in smoke has always seemed to me the height of foolishness, and even if it hasn't been definitely proved that smoking is harmful to the health to any great extent, it has been proved that the health is better without them. Also, I must admit that though I waited in vain for the green tinge to appear in my face and the dash for the great outdoors, the floor did start doing peculiar things and I had to go and look at the calendar to make sure I wasn't already on the Queen Mary in mid Atlantic. I know our foundations need fixing but that couldn't account for acute angles that came and went in our sitting room Saturday. No one can convince me now that tobacco isn't harmful for something that can do that to a slightly ancient, but in good health, I believe, human like myself, must do something to one's make up to bring about the state of adaption to the angles.

If you've got to wear those stockings right away after washing, wrap them in a terry towel and run it through the washing machine wringer. Do it again with a new towel, if necessary.

OCRACOKE PTA HAS ACTIVE PROGRAM IN IMPROVEMENTS

Building Repairs, Playground Improvements, and Kitchen Additions Voted

Ocracoke Jan. 17.—Ocracoke School P. T. A. met on Monday night at the school library, with Harvey Wahab presiding. Treasurer Eph Esham reported a balance of approximately $400 in the treasury, and the P. T. A. voted to spend about half of this for asbestos shingles for the recreation hall in order to insulate and weather-proof the building. Mr. Rondthaler reported that the new belt-type safety swings had proved fine for the playground and the P. T. A. voted to purchase four more of these. Mrs. Doris Garrish, Mrs. Dicie Wells and Mrs. Theodore Rondthaler were appointed to act as a P. T. A. kitchen committee and purchase any needed equipment from time to time. The P. T. A. voted to have a "stunt night" in February; definite plans for the program to be worked out by Mrs. Benjamin Spencer and Mrs. Theodore Rondthaler. NO LIMIT ON VEGETABLE ACREAGE DURING 1955

Tar Heel farmers can produce all the vegetables they want to this year without worrying about acreage.

Previously proposed limitations on the productions of commercial vegetables, potatoes, and sweet potatoes, an acre diverted from allotment crops will not be in effect for 1955 according to a recent announcement by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The proposals limiting acreage of these crops originally grew out of the prospect that 1954 crops might add substantially to some serious surplus problems. The prospect of more flexible price supports next year, plus the effects of widespread drought this year, have erased these fears, Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Benson explained in announcing the change.

Preliminary checks have also shown that vegetable and potato acreages were not increased in 1955 even though there was no limitation on the use of around 25 million acres diverted from allotment crops, Benson added.

With relaxation of the regulations on cross-compliance and total acreage allotments on basic crops for price support purposes, there is now greater opportunity to grow various other crops and less pressure to plant vegetables and potatoes on diverted acres, the secretary said.
