hens. Cost of materials figures about $75.

The new-type laying house is designed to be built on skids so that it may be easily moved from place to place on the farm. It can be disassembled into five panels and hauled on a truck for longer distances. This makes it a practical house for the family which is renting or living on a farm temporarily and wants a chicken house that can be moved readily.

Plans may be ordered through county agent's offices or by writing Agricultural Engineering Extension, N. C. State College, Raleigh. Ask for Plan No. 823.
