PARENTS TO BLAME FOR CHILD'S DELINQUENCY

Attorney Robert Wahab Outlines Bad Results of Home Environment

"In nine cases out of ten, juvenile delinquency can be attributed to home environment and should properly be called parental delinquency," Commonwealth's Attorney Robert S. Wahab told the Virginia Beach Civitans Club last week. This does not mean broken or impoverished homes as such Wahab explained. It does mean homes of all kinds where conditions of neglect, parental conflict or intemperance lead to insecurity for the juvenile.

Citing F. B. I. crime statistics the Commonwealth's Attorney told how juvenile crime had increased 17 per cent in 1956 over the previous year. Of persons charged with major crimes, 46 per cent were 18 or younger. In the category of first arrests, the 15 year age group contributed more arrests than any other age group. In response to questions, Wahab indicated that Princess Anne County and Virginia Beach statistics showed that this community was keeping pace with the national averages for juvenile crime.

Pointing out that these startling figures represented only 2 per cent of the total juvenile population being involved, Wahab urged the Civitans to recognize the problem, not to over-emphasize or ignore it. Recognition should be, he said, by parents setting the proper example for their children, by understanding and treating juvenile problems with reason and tolerance, and by maintaining fair standards of discipline.

SCHOOL FOR ANGLERS OPENS AT NAGS HEAD ON MONDAY JUNE 10th

Nags Head. — America's most unusual summer school, State College Extension's Sport Fishing Short Course, opens here on Monday, June 10 and continues through Friday, June 14. It will be the second year that anglers, approximately 100 in the classes, have studied salt and fresh water fishing methods, tackle types and construction, baits and lures and just about all there is to know about catching everything from black bass to blue marlin, here at Nags Head. Headquarters for the school again this year will be at The Carolinian Hotel.

The staff of instructors whether the classroom for the day is ashore or afloat will include such expert fishermen as Hal Lyman, publisher of Salt Water Sportsman; Art Graham, a manufacturer's representative from New Orleans; Fred Barkalow, N. C. State College; Ted Henson, former southeastern casting champ of Apopka, Fla.; Dick Wolff, spinning expert of the Garcia Fisherman; Noon Hudson, rod expert with the Shakespeare Company, Atlanta; Bill Hassler, fisheries research biologist of State College; Len Hauk, St. Simons Island, Ga., an expert on lures; Rod Amund-son, chief of the education division, N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission; Gene Starnes, assistant director of State College Extension and E. W. Ruggles, its director.

Purpose of the course is to help anglers study the habits of sports fishing, to discuss variable factors involved in fishing success, to develop an appreciation for those factors through conservation of the fish crop, to determine specific use and limitations of the various types of tackle and to go on fishing trips with experts.

Anglers taking the course this year have an opportunity to catch any one or some 30 or more varieties of game fish, more than 20 of which have already been landed in the fresh and salt waters of the Dare Coast to date this year, fishing that includes species ranging from half pound bream to blue marlin that scaled up to 381 pounds.

NOTE OF THANKS

We, the family of Mrs. Evelyn Midgett, wish to extend our appreciation to all who have sent cards, letters, flowers, and other expressions of friendship during her recent hospitalization and since her return home.
