did not lose trade by being judge but actually gained some instead.

Mr. Baum had other trial experience prior to becoming recorder's judge; he served as a justice of the peace for a period of time, just how long he is not certain, and for two years while mayor of Manteo also held a mayor's court. He also had four years service as a county commissioner, serving as chairman of the Board.

Now to digress a little, as Victor Meekins says, to add to this story, Judge Baum has what is called the "Baum bullheadedness," and once a Baum thinks he's right, there is no way to change his mind. This Baum blood prevails very strongly in those Roanoke Islanders of the Meekins, Ward, Etheridge and Daniels tribes of Roanoke Island, and some others too.

It was this tenacity which back in 1926 made Judge Wash Baum, then chairman of the Dare County board stick to his policy to build a bridge to Nags Head.

Frank Stick came to Roanoke Island from New Jersey and he told the Board of Commissioners how Dare County could be worth something to itself if it would build a bridge from Roanoke Island to Nags Head, connect up the beaches north and south and get a way across Currituck Sound.

Judge Baum had to be convinced so Mr. Stick took him to New Jersey and showed him what had happened in all the Asbury Park vicinity as a result of roads and bridges. Judge Baum returned convinced, and he set about bonding Dare County for money to build a bridge and causeway to Nags Head.

There was a lot of local opposition from people who just couldn't see so far ahead as Judge Baum thought he saw, and they said Dare County could never pay the debt.

But Judge Baum and his board of commissioners went ahead and built the bridge to Nags Head, and now nobody would say it was wrong. But the bullheadedness of Judge Baum is the only reason it got there when it did.

Returning to his career as a Judge, Mr. Baum says he tries to "mix mercy with justice." He also commented that while he likes to see the law observed he does not like to see any violator condemned

THIS WEEK -In Washington

With Clinton Davidson

Washington military, diplomatic and congressional leaders are measuring the relative U. S. and Russian military potentials in preparation for a firm stand at the forthcoming summit talks.

The yardstick being used is striking power, measured both in total force and ability to move rapidly to counterattack once the first blow has been delivered. The opinion of military experts we've talked with is that neither nation could deliver an initial knockout blow.

Japan, they recall, delivered an all-out sneak attack on Pearl Harbor that crippled our Navy. Our superiority in the movement of men and material to distant parts of the world proved, in the end, to be decisive.

Russia undoubtedly has, or will soon have, the ability to strike an even more punishing first blow through the use of long-range missiles. But we now have the ability to move fully equipped armies thousands of miles in a matter of hours, and to keep them supplied through an aerial pipeline.

Secretary of the Air Force, James H. Douglas, pointed out that, in addition to an undisclosed number of military planes, the U. S. has on a stand-by basis some 2,500 civilian cargo and passenger planes in a Civil Reserve Air Fleet that would dwarf the famous Berlin airlift.

Except for the availability of the CRAF, the military budget now before Congress might be appreciably larger. Secretary Douglas recognized this when he told a congressional military appropriations committee: "We have not ordered any turbojet transport aircraft for the Military Air Transport Service, such as the airlines have on order in large numbers, and which we count on the airlines making a part of CRAF. This fleet is an essential part of our wartime airlift ability."

These views are shared by Congressmen with whom we have talked. Rep. Prince H. Preston, (D., Ga.), Chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee for the Air Force, told us in an interview:

"Our not-so-secret weapon, more significant than all the Sputniks, is the Civil Reserve Air Fleet. It should be maintained and strengthened to give us unmatched ability to shift and concentrate our striking power in a matter of hours, not days or weeks."

"The building of a strong civilian air fleet through government assistance not only is good sense, it also is good economy. The Berlin air-lift demonstrated the value of our ability to move people and supplies safely and speedily."

Rep. Albert Thomas, (D., Tex.), another member of the subcommittee, told us that "if and when the next war starts, the initial movement of men and supplies must be done by air. This can be done only if we maintain and strengthen our air power, both military and civilian. An adequate reserve through the commercial airlines is of the utmost importance."

Rep. John J. Rooney, (D., N. Y.), also a member of the Air Force subcommittee, said "air power will continue to be of vital importance in our total defense for some time. I favor maximum utilization of both military and civilian planes as the most economical method for maintaining our air strength."

ing pushed in many sectors of Dare towards making the 1958 program one of the most unusual of all Dare Coast jumble jamborees.

On Hatteras, a schedule of events with Bill Dillon of Buxton as program chairman was announced last week. In addition to at least three pre-jamboree dances on tap for Hatteras Island, where pirate "bearas" are more plentiful than ever before and where scores of costumes are now in the making, one of the special features of the Hatteras Island phase of events will begin on Wednesday morning, April 23. This will be the surf fishing contest. "This will give anglers two and a half days to put their skill against fish of the surf prior to the awarding of prizes for the largest at noon on Friday," said Dillon.

Friday's program on Hatteras Island, most of which will be held at the greatly expanded and improved NRS Day Use area at the Point of Cape Hatteras, includes the big free fish fry, costume contests, a Coast Guard rescue drill, an exhibition of horsemanship by the Ocracoke Boy Scouts and their banker ponies, a big open-air dance at the new parking facilities, and the awarding of prizes for various contests. A beach buggy race if held, and it is planned, would be presented on the beach near Hatteras village rather than on National Park Service properties.

Dick Jordan and George Sides, co-chairmen of the Dare Beaches program on Saturday, April 26, have announced that one of the main attractions will be the pirate landing at Avalon Beach. Other events will include a bicycle race around Wright Memorial Monument, a bull-frog jumping contest at the Recreation Center, a treasure hunt for children in the vicinity of Kill Devil Hills monument, and an exhibition of sand skiing at Jockey Ridge. A children's costume contest will also be held in the vicinity of the Recreation Center. "Of course all plans for the Dare Beaches events which we have lined up are subject to the approval of the general committee at their next meeting," said Jordan.

Finale of the Dare Beaches event would be the gala coronation ball. On the following day, Sunday, April 27, it is planned to move the scene of events to Manteo where the Dare Power Boat Association would present wildcat boat races and to Manns Harbor where open-air religious services to be arranged by Stanford White will be held.

Already, promotional activities in Dare for the big Jamboree are gaining momentum. Dick Purser, in charge of souvenir sales, is busy stocking merchants with pirate paraphernalia, and Jolly Roger flags are appearing on automobiles. Silver dollars and "pieces of eight" are clinking in purses and merchant tills, and under the leadership of Julian Oneto and Wallace McCown pirate caravans to cities and shows for radio and television stations are being arranged.

he doesn't want to run again, and encouragement from several people has been given his son-in-law George Fuller to seek the office representing Hatteras township. Fuller, a successful business man has ability and personality as well as youth.

The Chairman of the Board, Claude Duvall is expected to run again, since he is well paid by virtue of the office, what with his $50 a month from the county, and other considerations which come to him because of his position. A number of citizens of the mainland have been urging Horace Hooper of Stumpy Point to be a candidate for this office.

No reports have come from the Board of Education, although Leland Wise of Stumpy Point is expected to run again, as well as Robert Ballance of Manteo. There are some rumors afloat that candidates for other offices will be in the field before filing time closes, this being considered a good year to get elected.

Judge Washington Baum, after 27 years in office has not definitely made up his mind about seeking another term, but most friends believe he will run. Rep. R. Bruce Etheridge has already said he is a candidate for the 1959 legislature.

The County Board of elections this year is expected to consist of Wayland Fry, chairman, W. H. Beacham of Kitty Hawk for the Republicans, and L. V. Gaskill of Wanchese. Republicans recommended two others, E. B. Scarborough of Avon, and Ted Toler of Kitty Hawk. Democrats also recommended a third person, Jasper S. Hooper of Stumpy Point.

ard of Belhaven, and the chairman and clerk to the board were authorized to sign the contract. The motion called for the contract to be made a part of the minutes, but on Thursday morning Melvin R. Daniels, clerk to the board, stated that the contract had not been received in his office.

The board approved the abandonment of a short piece of road at Buxton designated as Road No. 2 on a map of three roads which the State Highway Commission has proposed to abandon, but the board protested the abandonment of two other roads, one in Nags Head woods and one at Buxton, protests having been lodged by owners of adjacent property.

On request from the Board of Education, the clerk to the board was instructed to write the State Highway Commission about two matters. One was a request that the state improve a short piece of road at Hatteras known as the South Back Road, and the other was a request that the state put in curb, gutter, and a sidewalk from the existing curb and gutter going south from the Town of Manteo to the new Manteo High School.

Glimpses of the Past

By CAROLYN LLOYD

Before the days of movies, radio, and television, home talent shows were popular in Belhaven, as well as in towns large and small throughout the land. Without the yardstick of professional performers to judge by, people enjoyed the acting and antics of the home town folks. In every town there were a few people whose talents were always in demand. One of those in Belhaven was Mrs. H. R. Way, whose name is still known locally and far afield. Her favorite role on the local stage was that of "end man" in the minstrels that were dear to the heart of the theater goers. Mrs. Way wrote her own material for these shows, using local names to heighten the interest. The following is an excerpt from one of her minstrel scripts and may bring back memories to those who enjoyed the shows.

"O Lawd, give these thy servants de searching eyes of de Chief of Police Marvin Jones an de wisdom of de honorable Bill Sears. Connect their souls with de gospel thru and by de grand telephone system of dis here great, big beautiful Belhaven town. Luminat their brows with a tectric light sistum that never goes out which they may see one 'nuthers faults case it do go out. Overflow their minds with de fear of Judge Lee upon de road. Turpentine their magnation with de spirit of New Lake corn meal. Grease their lips with possum oil and onions so that their kisses wont last no longer than Ralph Swindell's bank account. Loosen their tongues like de sweet music of Mr. Pittman's sledge hammer when all de baff rooms is froze up. Lectify their brains with de knowledge of Heber Wilkinson when he reads dem air meter eaters. Roll the thunder of fear in de blushing bride to be dat she may never forget dem words, "Obey." Put petual motion in de groom's arms and a wallop in his hand. Change de law on wife beatin with a necessary perfection of a married man. Fill dis here couple plum full of Mr. Voliva's dynamite; 'noit them all over with Mr. Keaton's kerosene oil of salvation and den set 'em on fire."

Of those mentioned in the skit, three—Heber Wilkinson, Mr. Pittman, and Ralph Swindell—are still living in this vicinity. Mrs. Way herself, though a partial invalid, still has the unquenchable spirit that made her the hit of the minstrel shows. She doesn't leave her Beech Ridge home these days, but through the medium of radio, television, and newspapers she keeps up with a changing world. The years have dimmed neither her mind nor her enthusiasm. One of her hobbies is exchanging letters with pen pals; and, though she now must sometimes depend upon others to do the actual writing, it is a safe guess that her pen pals never find her letters dull.

There isn't much demand for hometown talent these days; but if there were and Mrs. Way could
