

KIDD BREWER'S Raleigh Roundup

FOR THE first time in several years we will have women—and not just the singular—in the N. C. General Assembly. At one time, we had three. This time will have at least two: Dr. Rachel Darden Davis of Kinston and Grace Taylor Rodenbaugh of Walnut Cove, and a veteran school teacher who will be serving her fourth consecutive term. Davis won in the runoff.

In the past we have had several female legislative members, but if memory serves correctly Dr. Davis will be the first of her sex from East of Greensboro. She succeeds Veteran Thomas White, who voluntarily got out of the game for a season to rebuild his law practice.

WITH THE PRESS . . . Current issue of Saturday Review, now become a more vigorous magazine, has an excellent picture of News and Observer Editor Jonathan Daniels on the front cover. His new book: "Prince of Carpetbaggers" . . . The N&O, ever the bird dog, assigned one of its crack reporters to Cabarrus County, for the recount of votes between tied-up Bedford Black and Even-Stephen Gene Bost. He has given day-to-day reports . . . News stand operators in Raleigh have been notified that Life, the weekly photomag, will be reduced from 25¢ to 15¢ per copy immediately . . . in the running battle with Satevepost.

One of the biggest trade magazines now printed in the South is edited by Garland Porter, Jonesville-W. Salem native who several years ago was head of the N. C. News Bureau now managed by Charlie Parker. . . . We The People, N. C. Citizens Assn. monthly labeled "we-the-people-against-the-people" in a speech by the late Kerr Scott, devotes its current issue to the N. C. tourist industry. Capably edited by former Education Assn. Head Jule Warren, mag is now in its 15th year.

FROM WASHINGTON we heard by grapevine last week that the President is expected to ease out Sherman Adams by September 1. Watch the date. GOP leaders in this State never felt very close to the cold New Englander.

The name "Sherm" may now become a term . . . in a vicinuary approach.

OLD FRIEND John Gordon, one of the men who built the Progressive Farmer to what it is today, was very deeply touched a few weeks ago when Clarence Poe lost his son, William.

At four o'clock one morning last week, Gordon was called from sleep and notified his son, third pilot on the jet tanker, had been killed.

These fathers would agree their sons died serving their country, one in agriculture and from a sudden heart attack on a plane returning from Alabama . . . the other in a jet plane heading across the Atlantic.

POLITICAL NOTES . . . John Jordan, who beat out big money and some of Raleigh's biggest names, to win the State Senate seat by more than 2,000 votes last Saturday . . . is executive secretary of the N. C. Wholesalers Assn. . . . which needs strength in the face of big-store competition.

Within minutes after the count showed him the victor, Iredell County's rambunctious Hodges foe, C. V. Henkel, was on the telephone to line up Jordan in Henkel's efforts to be president pro tem of the State Senate . . . but we heard Sunday Jordan is not yet fully committed to Henkel . . . ???

The other man running for the place since a year ago: Robert Foster Morgan, Hodges' friend of Shelby and a son-in-law of Robeson County's Cutlar Moore . . . Cutlar's full name, incidentally, is Du Brutz Cutlar Moore . . . and one of his three children is named Du Brutz Cutlar, Jr. . . . Moore was such an ardent Hodges supporter in '57 that he was named to the revamped State Highway Commission . . . recently resigned this post to return to the Senate and husking for Hodges. He is smooth and energetic.

He was this State's first ABC store head . . . 1937-41. Good man.

WE PREDICT that Robert Foster Morgan will win out for president pro tem, Henkel having got into the battle too late, and two years hence will be a candidate for State Office. He is in the seed business with Morgan and Co. . . . This will be his fourth regular term in the State Senate . . . and also fourth for his father-in-law from Lumberton.

WHILE WHOLESALER HEAD John Jordan was winning in the runoff for the State Senate, Good member Wholesaler Roberts Jernigan of Hertford County was losing out for the House.

Jordan is a native of Hertford County. His wife is the former Patricia Weaver, daughter of Dr. Carl Weaver of Asheville, and a distant cousin of Former Congressman Zeb Weaver.

AROUND TOWN . . . On the day he was appointed to the State Utilities Commission ($11,000 per year), Roxboro's young (he will be 35 in November) Dick Long had lunch with Greater University President Bill Friday at the S&W . . . This is regarded here as one of Hodges' best appointments.

Seen riding downtown Sir Walter-ward Saturday evening after all the votes were in: Champ Lobbyist Hathaway Cross and Good Friend State Treasurer Edwin Gill . . . in the Cross cream clean Ford Fairlane . . .

Governor Luther Hodges wrote an inquirer a few days ago that he is accepting no new speaking engagements . . . feeling he has too many already . . . for five, six months. He's preparing for what he regards as a busy, hard, and long . . . though interesting . . . Legislature . . . with sweaty budget hearings just around the corner.

The new chairman of the State Utilities Commission is 52, a native of Manteo, former head of Markets Division in State Ag. Dept., and appointed to Utilities by K. Scott in 1950: His wife: Helen Rankin, Gastonia Rankins and Lineburgers. He graduated at State in 1928.
