

ON MAKING THE MOST OF WHAT WE HAVE

A perennial wail from most small towns is for more payrolls. It is loudest in dull season when stores are empty, and merchants hunger for the cash register music that accompanies the free spending of what so many call the "working class" of people. It is widely accepted that those who work in small factories spend their money "as soon as they get it," which often means they spend because they are in need.

A weekly payroll is what merchants like to see, when on a Saturday night those with pay checks sally forth to supply their household needs, and buy themselves new clothes or a trinket or two for the children. A weekly payroll follows the construction of some sort of a mill or a plant requiring an investment of many thousands of dollars. Right there is where local interest stops, for the business man who hawks the loudest about dull trade, often is the last fellow who would put up a cent of capital stock to establish an industry in his home town.

The general refrain is that "somebody ought to come here and start up a big factory." It is a foolish statement indeed, and one made without any thinking whatever. Establishment of a big factory is not profitable, nor possible other than under certain favorable conditions. First it must be centrally located where transportation is easy, both in and out. Freight rates being a terrific factor; it must be near the source of raw materials and it must be in a location advantageous for distribution of its products. And above all, it must have nearby, an ample and dependable labor supply.

Many of these factors operate against the establishment of industry in several sections of our coastland. All of these factors operate completely against some sections. Large manufacturing enterprises in this highly competitive age operate on a small margin of profit, hence they depend for dividends on large volume operations at a high peak.

In many parts of the coastland there is no railroad transportation. Raw materials must be hauled by motor truck a long distance to a dead-end, and from this same dead-end the finished product must take off again on its long journey to the consumer. All this is not said by way of closing the door on establishment of industry in our coastland. To the contrary, it is to shine the light on the problems that face us, so that we may find our way around our drawbacks and stumbling blocks. There is no need to waste our time running down blind avenues in search of industry. Our challenge is to exercise resourcefulness, ingenuity, and long-planning, whereby we may find something new and valuable that will lend itself to development into profitable payrolls for our communities.

In the meantime however, we will waste a lot of time, and lose a lot of money if we merely cast blindly about seeking someone who might come in with the capital to establish industry. We can throw the world away combing for stray pennies, while we already have fortunes right here in our own yard. At this time some 80 per cent of the income of many areas of this coastland comes from the trade of tourists who visit us the year round. Currituck, Hyde, and Tyrell of course are more fortunate than Dare in that their traditional agriculture is a sustaining economic backlog. But Dare, with its Government payroll diminished to a new low, and its once profitable commercial fisheries depleting year by year, may consider itself fortunate if it can get 20 per cent of its income from anything other than the tourist dollar.

Since our section has so much to sell to tourists, and can prepare itself to handle many times over the business it now enjoys from tourist sources, it has only to prepare itself to accommodate more people. Like any other business, the package must be nicer, there must be a few more pleasant surprises for the customer, and of course, the prime requisite for ca-

DURHAM GIRL MARRIES KITTY HAWK MAN JULY 17

MRS. CONLEY ROSS BEACHAM, who before her marriage on Thursday evening, July 17, was Miss Elizabeth Kay Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Crandell Nelson of Durham. Mr. Beacham is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Beacham of Kitty Hawk.

Durham.—Thursday evening at 7:30 at Bragtown Baptist Church Miss Elizabeth Kay Nelson of Durham became the bride of Conley Ross Beacham of Kitty Hawk. The Rev. Lawrence H. Knott of Clinton, uncle of the bride, officiated in the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Crandell Nelson of Durham, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Leland Beacham of Kitty Hawk.

Prior to the ceremony, Miss Phyllis Duke, organist, and Miss Sandra Motley, vocalist, presented a program of wedding music.

The vows were spoken before a background of woodwardia ferns and palms, wrought iron candelabra burning white candles, floor baskets filled with white flowers. The family pews were marked with white flowers and white ribbons. A Prie-Dieu covered with white satin centered the wedding scene.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a dress of chantilly lace which featured a fitted bodice, "V" neckline, designed with seed pearl and sequins, long fitted sleeves ending in points over wrist.

tering to any customer is courtesy.

Courtesy should be the watchword—the motto of the people of the Coastland. By making our visitors feel happy, at home and as if among friends, we need only a limited investment in cash. Nature have provided us free with the most valuable thing one may sell. So long as we operate by the same rules of any other successful merchant or salesman we can, right here at home, develop a tremendous industry out of what we already have. It's all right if we get a little industry going to warm us up during the dull months of winter, but the one we already have will continue to bring home more and better bacon, and above all no problems with it; a business that's always cash on the barrel-head, no headaches, no refunds, no adjustments, no bad accounts. What can beat a deal like this?

AVON AND HATTERAS HARBOR IMPROVEMENT PROJECTS UNDERWAY

Wilmington, July 10.—Maintenance dredging got underway Wednesday at Avon on the Outer Banks in a four-way project which will end three months hence at Barden's Inlet at Lookout Bight, according to a report by Col. H. C. Rowland, Jr., the Corps of Engineers District Engineer here.

Colonel Rowland's announcement said the Avon work, consisting of about 17,000 cubic yards of material to restore project channel depth of six feet, will be completed about July 15. From this point the dredge will move to Wallace Channel inside of Ocracoke Inlet to dredge an estimated 100,000 cubic yards to restore the normal 12-foot depth. This will take about 12 days to complete.

Third step in the work involves shoals in the seven-foot-deep waterway from Pamlico Sound to Beaufort Harbor and to include dredging in Atlantic's seven-foot channel and the five-foot channel at Davis. Approximately 20 days will be required to move the estimated 125,000 cubic yards.

Final phase will concern restoring project depth of seven feet in the channel leading from Back Sound to Lookout Bight which is popularly known as Barden's Inlet. This job involves some 35,000 cubic yards and will require about a week to finish.

The work is under contract to the Norfolk Dredging Company of Norfolk at $142,850. The Norfolk firm has assigned the work to the 16-inch dredge CHARLESTON.

Colonel Rowland's report also pointed out that work has begun on the construction of a protective fender system on each side of the entrance through the rubble stone breakwater at Hatteras. This work is under contract to T. J. Crooks and E. W. Tate Construction Company of Norfolk for $9,203. It will require about a month to complete.

One other project, he said, concerns the beginning of a continuing project to restore the Atlantic Intra-coastal Waterway to project depth of 12 feet. The Cottrell Contracting Company of Norfolk is scheduled to begin dredging in the Neuse River—Newport River section on July 18 at an award of $116,580. Other sections of the sheltered route will be dredged to project depth as funds become available. The firm will use the 12-inch dredge MARION to perform the work.
