BUXTON SENIORS VISIT N. CAROLINA MOUNTAINS

Last week seven members of the senior class of Cape Hatteras School went on the annual senior trip. The group left the school on Tuesday morning, hoping to reach Asheville by night. Several mishaps prevented this and the group spent Tuesday night in Lexington. On Wednesday afternoon the seniors reached Asheville and spent the remainder of the afternoon seeing local sights. Several of the seniors and the chaperones even tried mountain climbing. On Thursday the group visited the Indian village at Cherokee and planned to ride along the Blue Ridge Parkway, see Mount Mitchell, and climb Grandfather Mountain.

The weather refused to co-operate and the Parkway drive was accomplished during a heavy fog and snowstorm so that little was seen. The seniors, however, were determined to climb Grandfather Mountain which they did. They got to the top, tired and thirsty, to find the temperature below freezing and the water fountain frozen and were forced to quench their thirst by eating handfuls of snow. Thursday night was spent in Statesville. The group started home on Friday, but the two carloads were separated, one getting home on Friday night and the other on Saturday morning.

In spite of the bad weather and other incidents, everyone enjoyed the trip and would like to repeat it. Seniors making the trip were Jo Anne Midgett, Virginia Tolson, Claudine Williams, Betty Price, Ruby Fagley, Dale Burrus, and Robert Austin. They were chaperoned by Mrs. Kathryn Midgett and Miss Kaye Whitfield.
