HIGH BID REJECTED FOR DREDGING ON OREGON INLET RUN

Norfolk Firm Wanted $93,500 To Clean Out Channel for Short Ferry Run

RALEIGH - State Highway Department engineers are exploring new possibilities for improving Oregon Inlet ferryboat servce following Highway Commission rejectin last week of a channel dredging bid which ran far above engineering estimates.

Ferryboats of the Department have been plying a long channel routing between Bodie Island and Hatteras Island for several months following a series of coastal storms which closed the regular short channel. The rejected bid of $93,500 from a Norfolk dredging firm war for removal of some 100,000 cubic yards of silt to permit reopening of the short route but it ran $43,500 above estimates.

Today, highway engineers are fearful that the dredging job would be far greater than anticipated and are investigating the possibility of obtaining two additional ferryboats to increase the number of daily trips through the longer

An appeal for two additional boats went out this week from Division Highway Engineer W. N. Spruill of Ahoskie to R. F. Gibbs, Superintendent of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore Park. Gibbs, contacted in Arizona, said he would immediately relay the request to Department of Interior officials in an effort to get two surplus LCU's from the U. S. Navy.

New soundings of the short channel made recently revealed that there has been an additional siltlar channel could ever be opened up for any reasonable length of time. Three times previously the channel has been opened only to fill up within a shrot period of time. It now appears that some 7,500 feet would require as high as 150, 000 cubic yards.

The sessions of this International and more frequent trips across the Assembly will continue through Inlet by installing additional boats on the longer channel which war better protection from winds and

After the new soundings were taken, it was estimated that dredging the old channel might cost as much as $125.000 to $150.000 instead of approximately $50,000 as originally estimated, with little hope that the channel could be kept open indefinitely.

Officials say there is a good possibility of giving improved ferry service on a more permanent basis by securing additional boats for the longer and more permanent chan-

LOST COLONY DIRECTORS APPROVE YEAR'S BUDGET

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Roanoke Island Historical Association was held in Manteo Monday. Mrs. O. Max Gardner of Shelby, Chairman of the Board and Mrs. Fred W. Morrison of Washington D. C. attended. The Board reviewed the budget for the current season, which is approximately $122,000, an increase of more than $40,000 over last year, due to the large sum required to restore the property damaged by tides and winds during hurricane Donna in September. Nothing has been recovered from the insurance companies up to now, and the work of tributions that have been made by public spirited citizens.

Mrs. Ina Evans, appeared before the Board requesting a contribution from the Lost Colony for the Dare County Tourist Bureau, which ecutive committee, inasmuch as the Lost Colony has insufficient funds for its own purposes, while the Tourist Bureau is already receiving that each organization helps advertise Dare County, but no opinion was expressed as to which does most in this respect. AS MAYOR OF MANTEO Large Crowd at Hatteras Fish Fry: Parade Through Manteo New Feature of Three-Day Event

> The seventh annual Dare Coast Pirates Jamboree is over and the Dare Coast-Outer Banks vacation season for 1961 has been officially launched.

Finale to the two day event, which resulted in national pre-Jamboree publicity for the area and what was termed by law enforcement officers as the largest week end crowd in the history of the Dare Coast, was held in Nags Head Casino on Saturday night. No one seemed to have an exact count of the number of people who crowded into Casino for the Pirate Ball finale but many said it was the largest number ever attending any event there.

Despite this fact, the Jamboree's dollar take on the Saturday night Jamboree finale dance would be year, if present plans carry, there will be a new convention hall on the beach which will be ground floor footage of The Casino, where the sponsors of the Jamboree will not have to share the take with a private operator.
