Friday's Child

By LAWRENCE MADDRY

Robert Frost, the 88 year old poet laureate of America smiled out to the public behind a shock of silver hair on the cover of "Life" last week. The magazine carried poems from his latest collection, "In the Clearing," and noted that he recently received a medal from congress for the simple, wry, puffs of life which he turns out year after year.

The Child ran across a copy of the Atlantic Monthly for November, 1957 recently which contained a five page poem of Frost's entitled "Kitty Hawk." A few lines follow:

"Kitty Hawk, O Kitty, know you no dismay Men will get away. And some time in some Mood akin to pity You would weep no less For Man's small success Than his unsuccess. You'd be overcome In the deathless scene When that common seef, Poor Darius Green, And his fool machine Finally took off.

Henry Cheevers, colored mystic of Manteo has reported seeing a bullfrog walking upright with teeth 3 inches long while returning to his home in the Burnside section late Tuesday night. Cheevers stated that it was the first such animal he has encountered in his years of experience with nocturnal objects. An artists conception of the animal is reproduced below. Cheevers has reported no ill effects from the encounter, but neighbors testify that he is developing warts which are freckled with green eyes.

The Dare County Boat Club is all for storm relief, but they'd sort of like to get their stove back. About a week ago, when the Lions Club was working overtime in the building which the boat club loaned to them, the stove disappeared while the Lions were distributing the countless stoves, refrigerators and other appliances which had been donated to the needy by fellow Tar Heels.

ON ACADEMY HONOR ROLL

Colonel Roy W. Haynes, headmaster at Fishburne Military Academy, Waynesboro, Va., announces that Cadet Paul E. Dykstra, Jr., has achieved the academic second honor roll for the first semester of the 1961-1962 term. Cadet Dykstra is in his junior year at Fishburne School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Dykstra of Nags Head.

Nobody seems to know what happened and Ralph Umphlett, Lions president, has been red-faced all week. He swears they'll either get it back or buy a new one for the boaters.

National Library Week begins on Sunday and it just serves to remind me of my more unfortunate experiences with books and libraries. I just happen to have one of the worst memories in North Carolina, or perhaps the world. It's the kind of thing that isn't cultivated overnight, either. It takes years of neglect and studied carelessness to even approach the kind of forgetfulness that I lay claim to.

The only person I ever knew who was better at forgetting than I am was a fellow named Smith... Henderson... Andrews, or something like that, who lived in Elizabeth City... or Norfolk... Massachusetts or somewhere up there who could never remember when he was born and celebrated his 12th birthday the year he retired from the Coast Guard.

My only effort to correct this fault of mine occurred while in the army. As anybody knows, army libraries are the only civilized places on a military post. Many is the afternoon that I've slept away in one on a comfortable chair under the pretext of reading.

On one such occasion, my eyes caught the title of a book which seemed the answer to years of concentrated forgetfulness. The volume was called "Learning to Remember" and was written by a fellow named Overstreet or Claude or Johnson. I took the book back to the barracks with me, mislaid it somewhere, and haven't been able to locate it since. I can't remember for the life of me how much that fine was.
