POLIO STRIKES AFTER VISIT TO NAGS HEAD

All Parents Urged to Keep Children Home; For Their Own Benefit and That Of Others

under 20 years of age are being warned by Dare County health officials to avoid gatherings of all kinds, due to the widespread outbreak of infantile paralysis in North Carolina and Virginia. Dr. ATTORNEY PLANS K. C. Moore, county health officer, urges parents to keep their children away from moving picture theatres, picnics, Sunday Schools, and other places where large groups of people meet. He also advises that children be kept in their own homes as much as possible.

No cases of polio have yet been reported in Dare County, but this week it was announced that Mrs. Brent Wright, 29, of Newport News, Va., became ill with the disease 10 days after returning to her home from a visit with Mrs. T. C. Sawyer, Jr., at Nags Head. Mrs. Sawyer's home is in Camden.

School openings have been postponed. In order to make this move effective, it will be necessary for children and young people to stay away from other gath-
