

GLIMPSES OF THE PAST

By CAROLYN LLOYD

At last we "squares" are coming back into our own in a musical sense. Here it is Saturday night, and not once have I heard "Jailhouse Rock" or any tune (?) of its ilk.

One half-hour has been devoted to a salute to Irving Berlin, who is celebrating his fiftieth anniversary as a song writer.

It may seem ridiculous to the young, but most adults can shed a lot of years temporarily while listening to certain tunes.

As a matter of fact, the appearance of many old timers should be comforting to those who are past the first flush of youth.

There are those, of course, who look with disdain on all popular music, and that is their privilege, as long as they do not deny to us musical illiterates the right to enjoy simple tunes.

INTELLIGENT ELEPHANT OVERRATED AS PRODIGY

Washington. — Elephants are smart, but they are hardly the mental giants pictured by the tall-tale fraternity.

One zoo director, after an exhaustive study of animal behavior, placed the Indian elephant third in a list of 10 most intelligent animals, the National Geographic Magazine says.

Legends of the elephant's phenomenal memory and ability to even old scores often stem from the imagination of the mahouts who train and ride them.

The elephant concerned had seen a keeper steal its bread ration and hide the food under his turban.

As an example of his own credulity, Mr. Chaturvedi recalls an elephant roll call he witnessed when a young officer, as each name was sounded, the animal lifted its trunk, as if to say, "Present, sir."

LOW CALORIE APPLES PROVIDE TASTE TREATS

The apple season brings to the minds of school youngsters the old adage, "An apple for the teacher." But why not have apples for everyone?

Mrs. Rachel Ferguson, Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist, comments, "Because this is the apple season, let's take advantage of it and make meals and between-meal snacks both nutritious and delicious with apples."

Apples take their place along with other fruits, because of their food value, color, and versatility. Mrs. Ferguson points out that they can be served at breakfast, lunch or dinner in the form of hot or cold apple juice, fried apples, baked apples, stewed apples, hot or cold apple sauce.

Then you shouldn't forget apple jelly, apple pie, apple dumplings, and many other delicious dishes which can be made from apples.

Using apples in other ways, such as in fruit, vegetable or meat salads, can add flavor as well as food value. And it would be a real taste treat your family would rave about.

"A mellow, tasty, raw apple," continues Mrs. Ferguson, "contributes some of all the nutrients, yet it's low in calories, making it extra special to calorie counters."

For health's sake, serve your family apples—in a variety of ways—instead of sweets. If you must have something sweet, make sure there's something else in the food that provides other food values rather than sugar alone.

of its trunk, as if to say, "Present, sir." He was much impressed—until he learned that mahouts guided the salutes.

DEW-CONSCIOUS SCIENTISTS TAKE OVER POETS' DOMAIN

Washington. — Hand-headed scientists are elbowing poets aside to admire the dew.

Glistening droplets on grass and leaves, it has been learned, make up an important cog in nature's machinery. In some semi-arid places, dew is vital to plant life.

Dew does not fall from "the wings of clouds," as Shelley put it. It does not fall at all. It is formed in the same way that water films a pitcher of iced tea, the National Geographic Society says.

When the sun goes down, the air cools and can no longer hold as much water vapor as it did during the day. The moisture condenses on leaves and other objects. When the temperature drops below freezing, dew becomes frost.

Dew is formed most heavily on clear nights of fall, when there are few clouds to interfere with the radiation of heat from the earth's surface. Muggy or windy nights also hamper dew formation.

TANGERINES HARVESTED ON ROANOKE ISLAND

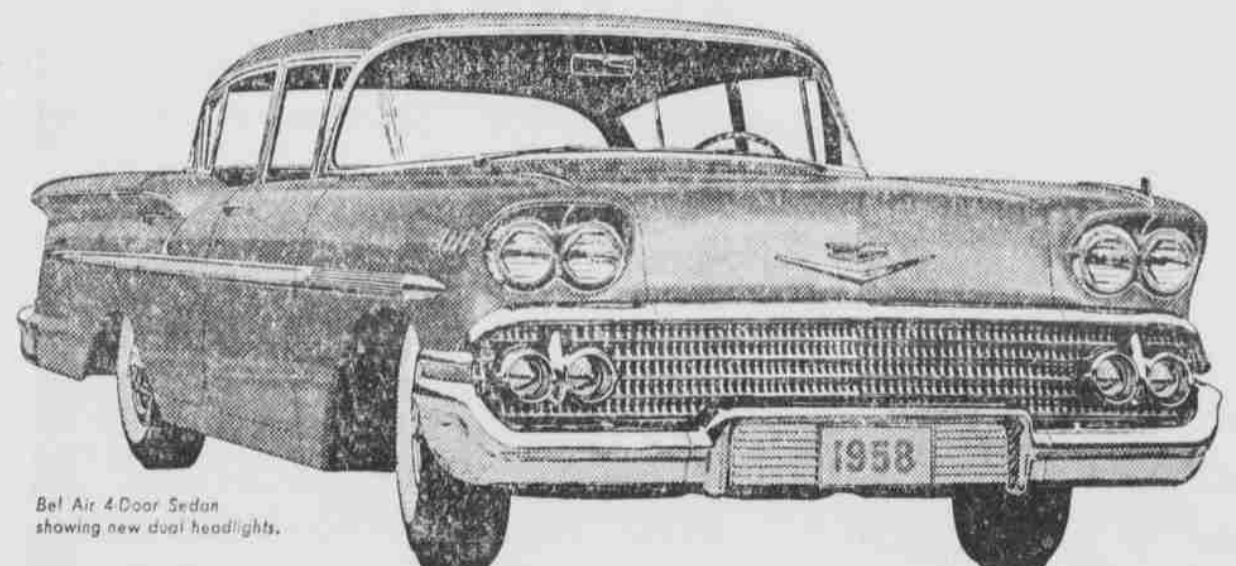

The fact that citrus fruit can be raised on Roanoke Island has come to light recently, when it became known that Mr. and Mrs. Albert Q. Bell, who operate the Roanoke Island Gardens near Manteo, last week harvested a bushel of tangerines from their tree which grows in the open on the north side of the greenhouse on their place.

For a number of years citrus fruit has been raised satisfactorily on Hatteras Island, and now it seems that Roanoke has been added to the Dare County citrus fruit area. The tangerines are sweet and some of them grew to large size.
