The Heads of the Steel Trust's Departments are Now in Conference

Young Ladies Leave Here for Other Fields. Social Items in the Capital City

By Telegraph to The Times.
McKEESPORT, Pa., Aug. 31.—At midnight every man in the open heart department of the Carnegie Steel Works at Duquesne went on a strike. The action of the men produced consternation among the trust officials and telegrams were sent to New York and Pittsburgh summoning the various executive heads of the Carnegie Company to Duquesne for a conference, which is now progressing with the strike leaders. The men declare that if the conference does not result in agreement the entire plant will be shut down today. The strike leaders are jubilant today and declare this blow at the Carnegie works is the greatest victory since the beginning of the strike.

MILLS STILL AT WORK.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 31.—The mills of the Carnegie Company at Duquesne were in operation this morning as usual, notwithstanding that the plant was badly crippled and would be closed this morning. The demonstration of the McKeesport strikers yesterday and the discharged men suspected of being union sympathizers were the expected cause of a general strike at the plant, but it did not occur this morning.

TAMMANY ALARMED

Effects of the Police Disclosures on the Campaign Dreaded

By Telegraph to The Times.
NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—The Tammany politicians began today to admit in private that they are alarmed by the situation in the police department and the effects of the disclosures and the possible effect of the courts will have upon the coming campaign. The apparent inability to control the judges in police trials has caused them to exert every influence possible to delay trials until after the election or to have a trial elsewhere through change of venue. More policemen may follow O'Neill's example and go "gher up" with more evidence. Patrolmen talk of going to the Supreme Court.

GERTRUDE COGHAN AS BECKY SHARP

At Academy of Music Tuesday Night. Notes of Some of the Plays that are Coming.

It may be fairly taken for granted that there will be renewed interest in matters theatrical now that the new season has commenced, and quite naturally the managers will be putting forth a number of important attractions that have been organized during the summer. The first of the good ones to arrive is Miss Coghlan as "Becky Sharp," in J. H. Noyes' dramatization of Thackeray's novel of "Vanity Fair," in which Miss Coghlan is starring. This will be the sole novelty of the week upon the professional stage. Those who are well-informed in affairs of the stage know that Miss Coghlan has achieved the greatest success of her career as "Becky Sharp," and the various accounts of her local theatre-goers to an usual extent, so much so that her appearance at the Academy of Music next Tuesday night, September 3rd, will most certainly draw an eager, anxious audience.

It was a daring undertaking of J. H. Noyes to dramatize Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," as it requires a master on stagecraft to accomplish it. It is a mixture of the world and the various puppets found therein; indeed an excellent key to Miss Coghlan's play may be found in Bunyan's wonderful description of "Vanity Fair" in that renowned work, "Pilgrim's Progress." Becky Sharp is an aspirant for fame—a fame that today many vainly try to acquire. The play is her adventures, her conquests, defeats and griefs and the pleasures therein. To succeed in her desire is her one principle, and a lack of honesty, truth, or love comes with her for naught. She is ambitious, she pushes, manoeuvres and finally succeeds. In her triumph she attains her desire, but she falls, and in that fall drags down those who are about her. The moral of Beck Sharp, like the moral of the book, is plain and unmistakable, and like the book the play is fascinating, entertaining and full of life and the happy misadventures thereof. Miss Coghlan's play is staged magnificently, requiring unusually heavy scenery. The principal characters in the play are as follows: Rawdon Crawley, the Marquis of Steyne, Sir Pitt Crawley, William DeBing, George Osborne, Joseph Sedley, Becky Sharp, Amelia Sedley, Miss Crawley, the Marchioness of Steyne, Lady Barchin, Lady Blanche "Thistlewood," her daughter, Mrs. Major O'Dowd, Miss Pinkerton, the Duchess of Richmond, and twenty others. Reserve seats now on sale, Prices 50c. to $1.50.

"BLACK PATTY."

The Black Patty Troubadours are coming to town. This organization has the best credentials of merit. Six years of phenomenal success. Black Patty leads the singing forces in the rendition of Dixie melodies, and operatic selections, while John Tucker, "The Alabama Blossom," sustains the fun with the comic songs of a large continent. Ten vaudeville acts—a new laughing skit, called "A Filipino Mistake," "Songs of Dixie," a new operatic kaleidoscope, and a champion cake walk contest are the attractive features of the performance.

AL G. FIELDS.

Each succeeding year Al G. Field has something of a different character in his comedy line to tickle the risibilities. His political travesties last year, "The Front Porch Campaign," and "A Day in the White House" were as mirth-provoking as anything in the comedy line. This season he has taken as a subject the Midway of the Pan-American Exposition and it is needless to say none of the principal characters of the day are overlooked, Chauncey Depew, Roosevelt, McKinley, Mark Hanna and all the prominent characters of the day have an inning on the Midway. Even Oom Paul is brought across the sea.

"MAY MANNERING."

Burr McIntosh, the actor-photographer, who made the photographs of Mary Manning as "Janice McFidelity," states that he has printed and sold since October last over 7,000 of these pictures. Miss Manning's photographs, both personal and in character, are now in greater demand than those of any other stage celebrity.

"ROGERS BROTHERS."

The Klaw and Erlinger Comedy Company and the Rogers Brothers in "The Rogers Brothers in Washington" have made the highest hit in Buffalo scored in years. They opened to over $1,200 Monday, the 19th inst., and during the remainder of the week played to capacity, selling out each day before six o'clock. They end their two weeks' stay Saturday night, the 31st inst. They now have one of the largest advance sales at regular prices on record at the Knickerbocker Theatre, in New York, where they began a long run Monday evening, September 2nd.

Let us foster and strengthen that confidence between those who employ labor and those who work which is essential to the peace of the State and the best interest of everybody.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be hereunto affixed, at the Capitol in the City of Raleigh, this 21st day of August, 1901, and in the 126th year of our American Independence.

STATE HISTORIES

Capt. Ashe's History of North Carolina Completed

For many years there has been a crying demand for an accurate and well written history of North Carolina. Wheeler's History was simply a series of sketches, and was notably one-sided and inaccurate. Moore's histories, while much better, are neither entirely accurate nor written in an interesting style. And when the Text Book Commission examined the histories submitted, it decided not to adopt any of them, but to wait until a proper history was written. It was then understood that such histories were in course of preparation. Now it appears that we are to have two such histories, Capt. S. A. Ashe, for so many years editor of the News and Observer, has completed his history, and it is now being examined by the Text Book Commission. It is not known how far the history being written by Judge Clark has progressed, but it is reported that this will also be completed before very long. Both these gentlemen are able scholars, and each has the historical instinct as well as the historical learning, so that it is certain that in the near future we shall have a history of the State that will be adequate and satisfy the long-felt want.
