TODAY'S MARKETS

Weekly Cotton Letter.

Raleigh, N. C., May 13.—While prices have been gradually working lower his week, there has been no appreciaerpool continues to be the weak sister, and notwithstanding the lact that the cotton shortage exists in Great Britain, cotton shortage exists in Great Britain, trade conditions there do not appear such as to warrant purchases for advancing prices. This has been the nature of the case for some weeks and developments recently have thrown no additional light on the outlook. Slowly and with frequent upturns the prices of the old crop positions appears to be working lower and without a decided speculative change or unfavorable group. working lower and without a decided speculative change or unfavorable crop news there appears to be no induce ment to buy July cotton under 13½ cents than was the case over that figure. It has been, and still is, a most unsatisfactory market to trade in, and one in which 'profits are difficult to reap. But facts are facts, and must be recognized, and since Liverpool is not an encouraging factor in the situation, it would be roolish to advise purchases as long as the situation remains in its present apathetic condition. On of the Morning Post. That Editor Furman will take his place at the very top of high-class journalism does not admit of a doubt.

Indiana Democrats are complaining of the bitterness of the campaign between the Hearst and Parker forces. So accute is the feeling in some parts of the State that a new set of candidates is recommended. This would fail to relieve the situation, the same thing would occur between the new set, and would not be long about it.

Goldsboro is in the throes of a second-class carnival. The towns has used better discretion than most of them do who allow these nuisances to take up in their midst. The Goldsboro people confine this one to the limits of the first pickings. The new crop position at twould be foolish to advise purchase as long as the situation remains in its present apathetic condition. On the other hand, there is a great deal to be said against the short selling of the new crop. It does not show very much gray matter or originality to insist upon the bull side of the market from vestor the same state or originality to insist upon the bull side of the market from vestor the same state or originality to insist upon the bull side of the market from vestor the same state or originality to insist upon the bull side of the market from vestor the same state or originality to insist upon the bull side of the market from vestor the same state. But the fact of the matter is that every indication points to extremely limited reserves of old cotton to be carried into the new year. Had it not been for the war in the far East and the general trade reaction in this country cotton to the light reserves there will be an emornous demand for the first pickings. The new crop position of 2 to state the structure of the market from the other hand, there is a great deal to be said against the short selling of the new crop. them do who allow these nuisances to take up in their midst. The Goldsboro people confine this one to the limits of the court-nouse square, instead of allewing them to occupy places on the streets. Why any town should want such an aggregation of humanity, with their indifferent and often indecent exhibitions, is hard to understand. Their presence in a town means the carrying away every cent they can lay taeir hands on, and rendering no value whatever, in money or otherwise.

The cost of living varies, not so much because the prices for necessaries go up, as for the reason that people have made money and consequently are willing to put more of it into their living. When money is very scarce, people do on very little clothing, but when it's plentiful, they wear more and better clothing. It's much the same with food and house furniture. People—who get good wages buy more food, and what is more costly, than when wages are low and money is scarce. People never complain at the cost of living when money is easy and work plentiful. The fact is, the presence of these two conditions may be said to embody the ideal notion of material prosperity.

The Average Men of 75 Today is in the

"Is," Not "Has Been," Class. From Chicago Inter Ocean. The time was, and not so long ago either, when men of sixty-five and seventy regarded themselves, and were regarded by others, as having reached that point when they should be willing to retire from the activities of life.

Our conception of the man of seven-to retire from the activities of life.

Our conception of the man of seventy-five only a few years ago was that of a white-haired patriarch who found pleasure only in reminiscences, the sectarian weeklies checkers, dominoes and his grandchildren.

But the times have changed. The average man of seventy-five today is neither bent, feeble nor senile. He has not retired from the activities of life, that he is aware of; nor has he any idea of retiring. Much less is he inclined to surrender to the younger people around him any of the responsibilities or pleasures of existence. He reads the sporting columns, plays golf, roots for his favorite baseball club, and may perchance take a flyer on the Moreover, he is, if anything, inclined to be more attentive to the ladies than the was at sixty, at forty, or at thirty. There is William Ross, aged seven-There is William Ross, aged seventy-three, for instance, a farmer of Chaplin, Conn., who was supposed to be a retired and confirmed lachelor. After living alone for nearly half a century, after suffering a stroke of paralysis, and after frequently disambointing his relatives, who were looking for a share in his fortune of $100.000, by refusing to die, he fell in love with a young widow and married her. He is, in fact, only beginning life.

But this is hardly as forcible an illustration of the changed conditions we have been speaking of as the case of William Rich, aged eighty, of Greenwich, Conn., who, though twice a widower, has just eloped with his mother in-law, "with all the romance," it is said, of a youth of twenty-three.

The most loathsome and repulsive of all living things is the serpent, and the vilest and most degrading of all human diseases is Contagious Blood Poison. The serpent sinks its fangs into the fiesh and almost instantly the poison passes through the entire body. Contagious Blood Poison, beginning with a little ulcer, soon contaminates every drop of blood and spreads throughout the whole system. Painful swellings appear in the groins, a red rash and copper colored splotches break out on the body, the mouth and throat become ulcerated, and the hair and eye brows fall out; but these symptoms are mild compared to the wretchedness and suffering that come in the latter stages of the disease when it attacks the bones and more vital parts of the body. It is then that Contagious Blood Poison is seen in all its hideousness. The deep eating abscesses and sickening ulcers and tumors show the whole system is corrupted and poisoned, and unless relief comes soen this serpent disease tightens its coils and crushes out the life. The only antidote for the awful virus is S. S. S. It is mature's nemody, composed entirely of vegetable ingredients. S. S. S. destroys every vestige of the poison, purifies the blood and removes all danger of transmitting the awful taint to others. Nothing else will do this. Strong mineral remedies, like mercury and potash, dry up the sores and drive in the disease, but do not cure permanently. Send for our home treatment book and write us if in need of medical advice or special information. This will cost you nothing.
