The Times has frequently alluded to Raleigh's splendid banks as a matter of pride, indicating the sound and independent condition of the city's business, of which the banks are, as it were, the nerve centres. We found real pleasure in looking through the real pleasure in looking through the statements of these splendid institutions only a few days ago. Their hold-lineal 300 looms. Contracts for confirms if we wisted tions only a few days ago. Their holdings, if we mistake not, were more than two and a quarter million dollars. Think what a vast sum of money! It occurs to us that the banks have too much money, and that some of it ought now to be in other channels, so as to bring in a good interest. May we not draw some inferences from this condibring in a good interest. May we not draw some inferences from this condition of the Raleigh banks? Especially when this thing of having large amounts in banks is not universal. We fear it shows that Raleigh is short on business enterprises, and so the money supply has increased for the want of borrowers who could use it in the conduct of their business. The man who borrows money, if he has good collate in the conduct of t duct of their business. The man who borrows money, if he has good collateral, is the man of all men the bank wants to do business with. Here is the profit in banking, the thing all such institutions are looking for. Then there is another consideration which may help to explain the great abundance of money which these banks hold. Farmers are comparatively independent, and so are not borrowing any money with which to cultivate their farms. This looks especially plausible farms. This looks especially plausible others.

number of hands in order to cultivate the crop.

When the law is disregarded every good man and every legitimate industry, trade or profession suffers. This country is founded upon law. Its prompt observance is the hope and stay of all that is good and abiding. No man, no set of men, can afford to ignore and distinguished in the law. The trouble now in Colorado came from a wilful disregard of law, and of individual liberty. And now the organization of the Citizens' Alliance, it matters not what was the provocation. it matters not what was the provoca-tion, is just as bad, just as deplorable, Wilson—Cotton-seed Oil Mill, Ginas were the offences which they claim to be resenting. It is just as wrong to say a union man shall not work as it is to say a non-union man shall have no employment. The truth is, that both of these attitudes are wrong, and in direct conflict with the fundamental principles upon which this government rests. Every man has a right to work with the fundamental principles are wrong. rests. Every man has a right to work nery, and earn his living, whether he be union or non-union, and any effort to prevent this is a blow at the fundamentals of this free country, and its liberty-loving principles. There is no way to settle these things by violence, because extreme and violent action on the part of one will be resorted to by continues the only help for the market.

The industrial notes which we print each week show that North Carolina is in the forefront of the Southern States. In fact, there is no Southern States which reports the starting of so many nev enterprises of various sorts. We hope to see this continue, and by all means let us utilize our own people to operate these new factories and other enterprises, and not turn them over to foreign help and foreign capital. The condition of North Carolina banks shows that we possess an abundance of capital of our own to carry on all the business which may be started in the business which may be started in the State. Then, too, our colleges and schools are running over with patronage, young men and young ladies who are fitting themselves for usefulness in October, 9.62; November, 9.56; Decem life. These ought to be encouraged ber, 9.60. and helped in every way possible. Our steady State ought to offer an open door to every young man who desires to work and become useful. Nobody ought to be idle, or seek the army for employment. We have an abundance of railroads, farms, mills and mines, where every able-bodied North Carolina man can work and obtain good wages.
